SEIZE GIRLS IN CAFE KILLING

BUREAUCRACY IS DUG IN DEEP AND HOLDS ON TIGHT

Only Public Revolt Can Uproot It.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Dec. 27.—[Special.]—After half a century of intensive development, paternalism is so deeply intrenched in the federal government that it will take a political revolution to uproot it.

The farmers resist any curtailment of the vast machinery for promotion of the interest of agriculture at the expense of the public treasury built up since the civil war. Business men would economize almost everywhere else in the services furnished them by the department of commerce, which, enormously expanded when headed by Mr. Hoover, is about to move into a Greek temple covering three city squares. Labor is up in arms at any suggestion of retrenchment in the department of labor, which was created just before the world war.

Put Expense on Taxpayer.

Few of these services would have been established in the first place if the expense of their maintenance had been assessed in the form of taxes the ostensibly benefiting industries. In nearly every case the cost is imposed upon the entire body of taxpayers. The motive underlying the creation of each service to particular interests was that of getting something for nothing.

In many cases no actual service has been rendered, the bureaus involved taking credit for natural development.

The federal bureaucracy which fattens on paternalism is composed of [illegible] persons, through them approximately 2,500,000 people subsist, upon the government's civil pay roll. This octopus reaches a myriad of tentacles into both houses of congress and into both major political parties, compassing a strangle hold on legislation and appropriation.

Fear to Voice Objections.

Thousands of the most influential persons in private life are fully aware of the waste of public money on paternalism, on subsidies to agriculture, industry, and labor, and on functions foreign of the public activities and private morals of the individual, but refuse to speak out from fear of the vengeance of the bureaucracy.

"Everything you have said about the enormous waste of tax money in extravagant expenditures and in activities beyond the scope of the original conception of the federal government is true," said a millionaire manufacturer, who proceeded to cite numerous instances of his own observation. "But don't quote me. I am a lot of equipment to the postoffice department and I can't afford to talk to the business."

Revolt is brewing, however, in the ranks of industry and commerce against hampering government regulation. Merle Thorpe, editor of the Nation's Business, who has made a study of paternalism and the federal bureaucracy, asserts that business is no longer independent. I asked him to outline the results of his investigations.

Loses Freedom of Action.

"One of the factors of the present situation, generally overlooked, is that business has had its freedom of action whittled away," he said. "To-day it is no longer independent. It cannot move without jostling the tax collector, the commissioner, the supervisor, the inspector, the examiner and other public agents. It constantly runs over rules and regulations of bureaucratic origin and is continually entangled in miles of official red tape. Politics has seductively but nonetheless effectively hamstrung the manufacturer, the distributor, the merchandiser, the transportation man, the banker, the insurance man, the coal and timber producers, and the farmer.

"This hamstringing has been brought about not only by the nine-hundred thousand laws we have on the statute books, but by all-powerful hordes and bureaus and commissions to build up multitudinous and vexatious regulations which have all the effect of law.

"The second obstacle is the regulatory features of government. Every business man and practically every professional man is now directly or indirectly subject to regulations springing from congress, state legislatures, city and county councils, and administered by an army of bureaucrats.

"Consider the plight of the railroads today. One of our first experiments in regulation was designed to prevent unfair practices on the part

JAPANESE GIRD FOR BIG DRIVE AGAINST CHINESE

Mass Strength for March on Chinchow.

MUKDEN, Manchuria, Dec. 27.—(AP)—A major Japanese offensive toward Chinchow was believed today to be imminent in view of the arrival of considerable reinforcements from Japan. Heavy concentrations in the Yingkow region presaged renewed activity there, with authoritative observers predicting an early Japanese advance on Kowpangtze.

Telephone messages from Yingkow reported that the Japanese command had placed three battalions of infantry and one of artillery at Tienchuangtai, while other battalions already are at Yingkow, or on the way there from garrison points on the South Manchuria railway.

Regular Chinese troops, estimated at 4,000, with headquarters at Panshan, were said in the messages to be intrenched within a few miles of Tienchuangtai.

Trains, Ships Bring Troops.

The Japanese reinforcements were described as a mixed brigade including all arms, but their numbers were not revealed. It was known, however, that the disembarkation of seven Japanese transports was completed at Dairen yesterday, while several trains brought other troops here via Corea.

Their total was estimated at between 4,000 and 5,000 men, which would bring the complete Japanese strength in Manchuria to approximately 20,000. These figures are a closely guarded secret, but the Japanese command no longer considers itself bound to keep the total below the treaty figure of 16,000.

Additional aircraft also arrived recently from Japan, including four bombers of the largest type.

May Sweep to Chinchow.

Some predict that if the Japanese advance leads to a clash with Chinese forces near Panshan the resulting fighting may carry them on to Chinchow. Others are of the opinion that the Chinese may retire without resistance and that the forces centered in Chinchow will withdraw southward beyond the Great Wall or westward into Jehol province.

Reports from Peiping indicated that Marshal Chang Hsueh-liang, deposed governor of Manchuria, was willing to relinquish Chinchow, but was not inclined to find new headquarters for Gen. Yung Chen's army of 35,000 below the Great Wall and would likely let him shift for himself. He is reported to be seeking the aid of the Jehol war lord, Tang Yulin.

Sharp Fighting Reported.

SHANGHAI, Dec. 27.—(AP)—Kuo Min, official Chinese news agency, reported tonight that sharp fighting was going on between Japanese and Chinese along the Kowpangtze-Yingkow branch of the Peiping-Mukden [Sino-British] railway.

Chinese in Panic in Tientsin.

[Copyright: 1931: By the New York Times.]

SHANGHAI, Dec. 28 [Monday].—A panic is reported in the native city of Tientsin because of the arrival of Japanese troops sent to reinforce the garrison of the Japanese concession. The Chinese yesterday refused to furnish railway transportation for these reinforcements, which had arrived at Tangku, at the mouth of the Pei river. They consist of 2,000 infantrymen with four field guns.

Reinforcements for the Chinese garrison have arrived at Chinchow in the form of the "young men's frontier corps," made up of 2,400 students, who left here for the threatened city.

Tokio Lushes More Troops.

TOKIO, Dec. 27.—(AP)—Another mixed brigade of Japanese troops was ordered to Manchuria from Corea by the Japanese government today on the heels of its avowal to extend vigorously the campaign against Chinese irregulars in the direction of Chinchow.

A note, answering recent communications from the United States, Great Britain and France, said the Japanese army was forced by increased Chinese activities to begin a "general movement with a view to campaigning against bandits on a more extensive scale than hitherto. Therefore it is obvious the Japanese will have to advance to points west of the Liao river where the bandits have a base."

[The Tribune yesterday published Japan's note in full.]

Rengo dispatches from Mukden and war office intelligence information reported that Gen. Shigeru Honjo, Japanese commander in Manchuria, had ordered a new attack on Chinese irregulars along the Yingkow branch of the Peiping-Mukden railway and that the former had crossed the frozen Liao river, occupying the town of Tienchuangtai.

Petrillo Calls Music Strike in Radio Stations

James C. Petrillo, president of the Chicago Federation of Musicians, ordered a strike of radio bandsmen yesterday. The order, if carried out, would compel 430 musicians to walk out at midnight New Year's eve. It affects all except one station, WCFL, which is owned and operated by the Chicago Federation of Labor. Petrillo stated that Edward Nockels, labor leader and head of WCFL, had acceded to the musicians' demand for a 30 hour week with 35 hours' pay.

The order may also affect featured bands, which broadcast from hotel cafés, cabarets and night clubs. Petrillo said he had summoned leaders of these bands to his office and instructed them to cease playing at midnight Dec. 31 unless the microphones were shut off.

Indicates Strike May Spread.

Petrillo also made threats that the ban might be extended to include the Chicago studios of the CBS and NBC chains and that the strike may spread throughout the country. Regarding these phases of the threatened strike Petrillo said he had been in conference with Joseph Weber, president of the National Federation of Musicians, in New York.

"If the chains accept our demands in Chicago the musicians will stay on the job," Petrillo said. "If they try to feed programs to the local stations, either from the studios here or elsewhere, the strike will spread.

Stations Reject Demands.

"Responsibility for a strike, if one is called, rests solely with Mr. Petrillo," said Joseph B. Fleming, attorney for the Broadcasters' association, last night. "The musicians' union demands, among other things, a reduction from 35 to 30 hours a week with no reduction in pay. They also demand union regulation of the monitor control board. This operation belongs to the stations. The demands are unacceptable to the broadcasters.

"We have endeavored to conclude an agreement for 1932 under which musicians would receive the same scale of wages with the same rules and regulations as in 1931. We felt that in these times of business depression the fairness of such a proposal would appeal to members of the union.

"In calling a strike at this time of 450 men who receive an income in excess of $650,000 a year Mr. Petrillo is assuming a very grave responsibility. We would suggest that he give the matter a sober second thought before he carries his threat into execution."

Lockjaw from Broken Thumb Proves Fatal

NEW YORK CONVICT WINS A CONTEST FOR NEW YEAR RESOLUTION

New York, Dec. 27.—(Special.)—An inmate of New York county penitentiary, who was arrested early this year for stealing $207,000 in securities from the vaults of the National City bank, where he was employed as a clerk, won the New Year's resolution contest offered in Broadway Temple. The award was announced tonight.

George Gordon Battle, the attorney, who acted as chairman of the judging committee, said that the committee had voted unanimously on the convict's resolution.

Mr. Battle then read the resolution. It is as follows:

"Each day some daily good to do,
With trust in God to see me through;
To lend a hand to fellow men,
For some fare worse than I,
And watch my blessings multiply."

ENDS HER LIFE WITH POISON IN ESCORT'S AUTO

Miss Alina Dunn, 32 years old, of 909 Linden avenue, Winnetka, accountant for the Winnetka public schools, took poison yesterday afternoon while riding in the automobile of a friend near Geneva. She died a short time later in the Copley hospital in Aurora. A note in her purse directed a man named "Monica" to make funeral arrangements.

Miss Dunn, a former teacher, went to Wheaton yesterday where she met John A. Johnson, 32, of 211 Morton avenue, Batavia, whom she had known for several years. She asked to drive to Aurora. At Geneva, Johnson stopped for fifteen minutes while he entered a store. When he returned, he said, Miss Dunn made a remark about suicide. He believed she was joking, he said. A few minutes later, he said, Miss Dunn collapsed, and he took her to the hospital, where she died.

Miss Dunn came from DeKalb, and was a graduate of the DeKalb Teachers' college. She taught school for a while, then took an accounting course at Northwestern university. She was employed by the Winnetka school board last March.

Ed Takes His Xmas Where He Finds It

The Joseph Berons of 1341 Wrightwood avenue looked back, Friday night, with a glow of satisfaction on their Christmas dinner.

For the sake of auld lang syne they had invited Edward Thompson of 2555 Southport avenue to their feast and he had accepted. Thompson, who had been out of work for a long time, looked quite seedy when he arrived. His graying beard—he is 50—was half an inch long and his shirt was soiled.

But old friends are old friends and the Berons immediately fixed up Thompson. Mr. Beron lent him a razor and gave him some shaving soap and he shaved. Mrs. Beron presented him with a shirt. It was an old shirt of Mr. Beron's, but it was clean.

They All Enjoy Themselves.

They all sat down and did full justice to the excellent cookery of Mrs. Beron. Then Thompson went away and the Berons agreed it had been a successful Christmas. They had enjoyed themselves and they had done a good turn for a poor old friend.

"And just think," said Mr. Beron, "we still have $155 saved up. It was pretty hard to lay aside $5 a week in these times. By the way, I kept the money in the pocket of the shirt you gave Ed Thompson. Guess you took it out, didn't you?"

"No," replied Mrs. Beron, "I didn't."

A New Mr. Thompson.

Although the couple looked diligently for Thompson that night and on Saturday, they failed to find him. On Saturday night they went to the Sheffield avenue police station and asked Sergt. James Patterson to search for him and for the $155 shirt.

Last night the sergeant and his men met Thompson at Altgeld street and Southport avenue. He was no longer seedy. He had on a new hat, new shoes, a new and unfaded shirt, and a new suit. In his pockets were two bottles of liquor and $40, and on his breath was about another bottle of liquor.

"A merry, merry Christmas," said Edward Thompson, as he was led to a cell after being charged with larceny.

CASES OF WHISKY LISTED FOR U. S. EMBASSY IN CHILE

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

SANTIAGO, Chile, Dec. 27.—There is amusing comment in the local newspapers regarding the latest official list of diplomatic customs clearances. Over 100 cases of whisky, 200 cases of champagne, and 50 cases of brandy appear in the "entrance free" list for embassies and legations.

The American embassy heads the list in whisky with 11 cases, all of which were consigned to the third secretaries in the Santiago embassy.

Gang Admits Police Slaying on Wilson Ave.

A young gunman who tried to hold up the ticket seller in the Cort theater last night was captured when an actor chased him into the arms of a policeman. Details on page 4.

Two girls, one 17 years old, the other 16, and four youths were in custody at the detective bureau last night as members of the holdup gang which shot and killed Policeman James J. Caplis in an attempted robbery in the Beach View Gardens, 204 Wilson avenue, early last Monday morning. Three other men are sought.

Those under arrest made either complete or partial confessions, police said. Two of the men asserted both girls shared in the actual holdup attempt, and one of them quoted a fugitive member of the gun gang as charging that one of the girls fired the shot that killed Caplis. The girls denied this version, however, declaring they were outside of the restaurant during the shooting. Police said last night they doubted that either of the girls killed Caplis.

Girl Accused of Killing.

The girl who was accused of the killing by one of her companions is Marcella Rocco, 17 years old, 4356 West Adams street, member of a respectable family and graduate of a girls' academy. Frank Freeman, 23 years old, 1349 Van Buren street, leader of the bandit band, in his confession, said one of the fugitive robbers, "Rocco the Barber," accused Marcella of firing the fatal shot.

"When the shooting started I ran," said Freeman in his confession. "I had to jump over the wounded policeman at the top of the stairs. While we were driving away I asked: 'Who started the shooting?'

"Rocco the Barber said: 'Marcella shot him.' Marcella yelled: 'You're a liar. It was you.' I told them to shut up, that they would get us into trouble."

Seen Trying to Shield Selves.

Police said last night that Freeman apparently was trying to shield himself and his gunman pals by placing the blame for the killing on a girl. Another member of the bandit gang, Jack Burlison, 20 years old, 1622 Jackson boulevard, insisted in his confession that Marcella aided in the actual holdup. Burlison came here from Vassar, Mich.

Those held beside Marcella, Freeman and Burlison are Dorothy Evans, 16 years old, 2024 West Congress street, who was married at 15 and divorced shortly afterward; Nicholas Bruno, 21 years old, 2616 Augusta street, and Tony Pape, 18 years old, 1514 Taylor street.

Police Round Up Gang.

The capture of the four youths and two girls ended almost a week of ceaseless activity on the part of Chief of Detectives William Shoemaker, Deputy Chief Walter Storms and Lieuts. John L. Sullivan, Frank Johnson and Al Hoffman. The investigation started immediately after Caplis shot it out with the robbers in the Beach View Gardens. He was shot once, in the back, a feature which yet puzzles police.

Stories varied as to the gun play. They agreed, however, that Caplis, off duty, was sitting at a table with his sweetheart, that he separated himself from the other patrons and that he opened fire on the bandits. There was an exchange of shots. The gunmen fled down the stairway to the first floor entrance. Caplis was wounded while standing at the head of the stairs. Apparently one of the robbers

COUNTY FACING TAX DEMAND OF 450 MILLIONS

Bill a Record Despite Business Slump.

BY OSCAR HEWITT.

Cook county will soon be called upon to pay, despite the business depression, the largest tax bill in its history. It is certain to total $281,000,000, but it is more likely to be $286,000,000, and may reach even $289,000,000.

It will be $30,000,000 more than the property owners paid in the heyday of prosperity. It will be about $100,000,000 more than has been collected this year. It will be twice as much as was levied in taxes 10 years ago.

The county tax bill is that for 1930, which, under the law, will be delinquent on Jan. 1. But the taxes cannot be extended before that date. Therefore it seems certain that the special session of the legislature will postpone the penalty date.

Large Total Uncollected.

In addition to the 1930 tax bill, there is a large total of uncollected taxes for the last three years. Real estate owners owe $89,780,815 and owners of assessed personal property owe $49,920,860—a total of $139,801,675. Furthermore, real estate has been forfeited to the state for $25,114,065 in unpaid taxes. This brings the total of unpaid taxes for the last three tax years up to $163,900,000.

Add on the 1930 taxes of an estimated $286,595,000, and what the property owners really face is an aggregate tax bill of $450,000,000. That is the sum of the unpaid taxes, for the early part of 1932. That is the point at which the taxpayers have arrived by the careless expenditures, reckless waste, and studied extravagance by public officials, in the opinion of students of local governments.

However, many of the politicians express the belief that the taxes will be collected. Some of them think that the property owners can be compelled to pay, and as evidence of the correctness of that view point to a bill before the legislature which will require payment before taxes can be protested.

Point to Wealth of City.

Even school teachers and administrators have been asserting for the last three weeks that this is the second richest city in America, the schools have always gotten the money heretofore, and it will be obtained now in some way.

School people criticise "tax strikers," conveying the impression this group is chiefly responsible for the nonpayment of taxes.

There are a few public officials who believe that taxes must be reduced because tax money will be progressively more difficult to obtain. But this group has not proposed so far to go very far in reducing expenses. The city proposes a cut of 14 per cent in 1932 expenses, the county 13 per cent and the school board nearly 15 per cent.

These and similar cuts by other governments will only exceed by a little the increase in tax rates and assessed valuations, which will be tacked on to the 1930 taxes. But if these cuts are looked upon as an offset, they can be classed only as a deferred offset, because the cut in 1932 expense will not be registered in the tax bills until 1934.

Cite Record of Other Years.

Taking Cook county's experience in the collection of taxes as the guide, it is difficult to imagine that $286,595,000 in taxes will be collected in the next three months.

Of the 1929 taxes, due May 15 last, only $183,000,000 has been paid. The 1928 taxes, payable July 10, 1930, resulted in the collection of only $196,448,000.

The 1927 taxes, which were due in May, 1928—at almost the height of prosperity in the country—brought in $297,884,000 in cash. Of the 1926 taxes, $182,771,000 was collected. Stretching farther back in the collection experience one learns that never previously was $175,000,000 collected in one year on Cook county property for taxes.

Now it is proposed to collect $286,595,000 in taxes for 1930, with $138,301,000 of delinquent taxes and $25,114,000 of forfeited taxes on the books.

Offer Installment Plan.

But political leaders explain that a bill before the special session of the legislature to pay the 1930 taxes in six installments, will lighten the load. This proposes that the 1930 taxes for the state, bonds and interest charges and the schools, these estimated at 55 per cent of the total, shall be the first installment. If that program is adopted, then the tax payers will be called upon to pay $157,627,000 of the 1930 taxes in the next two months. Add to that the unpaid and forfeited taxes, and the total is $321,843,000 — still much the largest tax bill in the history of the county.

The following table, prepared by J. Louis Jacobs, efficiency expert—except the 1930 figure—shows the difference in the taxes extended and collected for a number of years in Cook county:

Year.	Taxes levied.	Taxes collected.	Pct.
1929	260,341,068	$183,689,302	70.5
1928	228,376,529	180,488,629	84.6
1927	220,642,891	207,684,000	90.5
1926	195,782,891	185,771,519	93.4
1925	190,356,257	174,716,616	91.3
1924	190,765,186	176,681,005	93.5
1923	238,548,420	167,456,906	93.2
1922	244,968,115	184,981,427	92.8
1921	140,794,194	130,000,000	92.3
1920	101,585,181	97,611,189	95.5

It will be noted that the demands in taxes are 155 per cent greater than they were in 1920. At each session of the legislature local officials have obtained more and more authority to levy taxes; and a few believe that still more taxes can be levied and collected. At least that is what they intimate in private conversations.

The prime purpose of the special session of the legislature is to devise some means to get the property owners to pay the taxes levied.

BUILDING TRADES LEADERS ACT TO ASSIST JOBLESS

Plans to initiate a permanent movement for unemployment relief will be considered this week by officials of the Association of Commerce, representatives of the building industry, and the governor's relief commission.

OSCAR ROSENTHAL.

Oscar W. Rosenthal, president of the National Association of Building Trades Employers, who first proposed a home and building modernizing program for Illinois, said that he and H. E. Wheelock, chairman of the Allied Construction Industries, would discuss the plan with Association of Commerce representatives tomorrow or Wednesday.

The governor's commission on unemployment relief will meet on Thursday, and the previous meeting is for the purpose of formulating definite proposals to make before that group. Gov. Emmerson is to be asked to call a state massmeeting to launch the movement, if a plan satisfactory to the commission is worked out.

The modernization program for the building industry calls for repairs, improvements, or overhauling, rather than the construction of new buildings, with resultant employment for labor and a return to the owner through lessened depreciation and increased rentals.

S O S STILLS RADIOS; SHIP "LATER" SAFE

New York, Dec. 27.—[Special.]—An S O S from the Mexican costal freighter Superior picked up tonight by the naval radio station NAX at Colon, Panama, caused all radio broadcasting stations in the vicinity of New York to go off the air for about fifteen minutes. The first signal was received by NAX about 9:50 p. m. Word was flashed to the naval station at Norfolk, Va., and from there to New York.

For the next fifteen minutes commercial wireless operators strained their ears for signals from the ship, but nothing further was heard. At the end of that time station NAX advised that "the distress had been relieved," and urged that traffic be resumed. But details as to just how aid reached the stricken vessel could not be obtained.

The Superior, a 1,000 ton coastal freighter running out of Vera Cruz to Gulf of Mexican ports carries freight and a few passengers.

There was considerable confusion as to the position of the Superior. First reports placed her in the Gulf of Mexico, and later ones about 200 miles from Balboa, in the Pacific.

Shooting Scrapes Mar Quiet German Christmas

BERLIN, Dec. 27.—(AP)—The Christmas holidays passed quietly throughout Germany except for several shooting scrapes and the arrest of twenty-eight Hitlerites [National Socialists] near Hamburg. Two Communists were fatally shot by a policeman whom they attacked in the village of Schwanta, near Potsdam. A Fascist was seriously wounded in a row with Communists in Hamborn. The twenty-eight National Socialists were arrested for breaking the "Christmas truce" by starting a street procession in Rahlstedt.

REVENUE RELIEF PROGRESS UP TO MEETING TODAY

Governor to Confer with Chicago Leaders.

BY PARKE BROWN.

Whether the special session of the general assembly is to be a washout or a success, it was said yesterday, depends almost entirely on the outcome of a conference that is to be held this noon.

After going through the motions of deliberation for seven weeks the assembly struck a rock in the form of the bill for the reconstruction of the Cook county taxing machinery and recessed until Jan. 5. It is believed now that whether any progress can be expected beginning with that date depends on the reaching of an agreement—almost entirely political in basis—for the replacement of the present boards of assessment and review with one smaller body headed by a single assessor.

Those in close touch with the situation say that probably the last chance for such an agreement lies in the conference today at the Stevens hotel, which is to be attended by Gov. Emmerson, Mayor Cermak, legislative and civic leaders, and representatives of some of the Chicago daily newspapers.

Calls Accord the First Step.

"The special session," said Mayor Cermak yesterday, "was called for the precise purpose of aiding the local governments of Cook county to meet the acute problems due to the reassessment, the depression, and other causes. So far, although the session was convened Nov. 5, extremely little in this direction has been accomplished.

"If the assembly is to go ahead with the bills submitted by Gov. Emmerson's tax conference it appears certain that the first step will have to be an accord on the proposal for the replacement of the present tax machinery. Everything before the special session seems to have been tied up by this one bill.

"We cannot expect the legislators, at their own expense, to spend week after week in Springfield unless definite accomplishments are in sight. And the one, perhaps the last, opportunity seems to assure a definite program seems to lie in tomorrow's conference. Unless we make definite progress now we may look forward to a danger that the special session may dwindle away to nothing."

Mayor Appears Hopeful.

The mayor, however, was not pessimistic concerning the outcome of the conference with Gov. Emmerson. He and others scheduled to participate believe that there will be a return to the plan agreed upon several weeks ago.

This provides for the appointment of one reviewer by the governor, the appointment of another reviewer by the president of the county board, and the selection by these two appointees of the one assessor. The three thus chosen would hold office until 1934, when all three places would be filled by election.

The early agreement between Gov. Emmerson, Mayor Cermak, and Senator Richard J. Barr of Joliet, president pro tempore of the upper house of the assembly, was that if the two appointed reviewers could not agree upon an assessor the third official would be named by the State Supreme court.

Since that time Mayor Cermak and his friends have urged that a greater degree of home rule would be preserved if the final selection of the assessor were placed in the hands of the nine judges of the First district of the Appellate court—the Cook county district.

It is believed that upon this basis today's conferees may reach an agreement.

Governor Pledges His Aid.

At Springfield last night Gov. Emmerson said he was taking a midnight train for Chicago prepared to spend all of today here in an effort to work out an understanding.

"We all want to be helpful in this crisis," he said, "and I believe the time has come when we must have a certainty of action by the assembly when it meets again next week or the special session may prove to be a failure so far as the principal purpose of its being called together is concerned.

"As a firm believer in home rule for Chicago and Cook county, I have no desire to name any one of the local taxing officials there. However, if Chicago and Cook county determine that the only way out of the present emergency is for me to make a temporary appointment, that is something for them to decide."

Barr Ready to Cooperate.

Just before the recess of the assembly for Christmas Senator Barr put through the senate an amendment to the bill presented by the governor's tax conference for abolishing the present boards of assessment and review. His amendment provides for the retention of the board of review as a complaint hearing body. But in political circles it is said Barr now is willing to go back to the idea of two reviewers, one named by the governor and the other by the president of the county board.

At Joliet last night Senator Barr said he would be willing to support any plan for the reconstruction of the taxing machinery that will bring the restoration of confidence urged by the governor's tax conference.

It is expected that the Stevens hotel meeting will be closed to the public. In addition to those already mentioned the conferees are to include D. F. Kelly, chairman of the citizens' tax warrant committee, who initiated the movement for the meeting; Melvin A. Traylor, president of the First National bank; James Simpson, president of the Chicago Plan commission, and Sewell Avery, chairman of the mayor's advisory commission.

The legislators invited to take part include, in addition to Senator Barr: Speaker David E. Shanahan, Representative Elmer J. Schnackenberg, chairman of the house committee on procedure; and the minority leaders of the two chambers, Representative Michael L. Igoe and Senator Thomas J. Courtney.

INDIANS STORM PIER AS GANDHI RETURNS HOME

Huge Crowd on Shore to Greet Idol.

BOMBAY, India, Dec. 28 [Monday].—(AP)—Mahatma Gandhi returned to his native India today, after exactly four months' absence, with nothing to offer his followers, he said, except renewed faith in God, peace and nonviolence."

Most of Bombay was still asleep when the Italian liner Pilana, with India's leader standing on the steerage deck, broke through the darkness of the Arabian sea and crept slowly into the harbor.

A huge crowd of the mahatma's followers stormed the pier, however, to greet their idol. Gandhi stood at the rail in his loin cloth with his English disciple, Miss Madeleine Slade, waving greetings.

"It is a delightful feeling to be home again," he wrote on a slip of paper. "But then my happiness is tempered with the sober realization of critical days that lie ahead."

Moslems Split with Hindus.

NEW DELHI, India, Dec. 27.—(AP)—Fresh bloodshed, a strike in Bombay and a Moslem split from the Hindu wand for independence will greet Mahatma Gandhi, Nationalist leader, when he returns to a tense India tomorrow.

Complete independence as a goal for the country was abandoned by the Moslem league today and "responsible government with adequate safeguards for Moslems" was substituted as the ultimate aim.

The decision, reached at a meeting here, is expected to have important repercussions on the future of India.

Riots have taken twelve lives in the last two days, while Gandhi was returning from London.

Hindus Fight Moslems.

The chief center of active unrest today was Lahore, where four Hindus and four Moslems were so seriously injured in communal rioting that they were taken to hospitals. Many others were treated for injuries by private physicians.

Eleven persons were reported to have been killed yesterday at Peshawar, where troops fired on a crowd of rioting anti-British "red shirts."

The arrest of Jawaharlal Nehru, president of the All-India congress, in the Bombay headquarters yesterday caused "hartal" (general strike and closing of shops) to be proclaimed in Bombay tomorrow as a protest.

ACCEPT BRITISH PLAN.

Modification of the chief plank in the Moslem league's platform is substantially along the lines of the resolutions reached by the Indian round table conference at its second meeting in London.

The British government's offer provides for creation of an all-India federation; a federal government responsible to a federal legislature; reservations during the transitional period, safeguarding finances, defense and foreign relations.

Gandhi alone rejected the offer, declaring he still wanted complete independence, and returned to India. Failure of the Hindus and Moslems, dominant among India's diverse communities, to reach some working agreement is one of the problems in the Indian situation. The Indian conference was "adjourned," not concluded, and a working committee remains in being in India.

Fight Post-Xmas Business on Sunday in Paris Store

PARIS, Dec. 27.—(AP)—After Christmas shopping was interrupted today in a large department store on the left bank of the Seine by a skirmish in which some persons protested against the establishment keeping open on Sunday and urged the employes to strike. They were dispersed by the police.

HAYMARKET RIOT VETERANS COUNT VACANT CHAIRS

Ten elderly men, survivors of 176 policemen who on the night of May 4, 1886, marched from the Des Plaines street station to quell anarchists in Haymarket square, met yesterday in the courtroom of the old station to conduct the business of the Association of Haymarket Riot Veterans. Five other survivors were unable to attend the meeting because of illness.

The ten who were there recounted their memories of that tragic night in 1886. Eight of their comrades were killed and 70 injured when a bomb was thrown into their midst as they attempted to disperse the anarchists.

The number of the veterans is thinning rapidly. Since the last meeting in May five have died. The survivors are carrying on under the leadership of Capt. Frank P. Tyrrell, 73 years old, president of the association.

Jeremiah A. Kennedy, 85 years old, treasurer, asked the veterans to notify him when they become ill or bedridden so that flowers may be sent.

Others who attended yesterday's meeting are Andrew O'Day, 77 years old; Solomon C. Steele, 84 years old; John Sisk, 83 years old; Sergt. John Brown, 75 years old; Hugh McNeil, 76 years old; George W. Roycroft, 84 years old; John T. Gibbons, 73 years old, and John Kinsella, 85 years old.

Niece of Woman Witness in Granady Trial Is Shot

Miss Grace Bowie, 16 years old, was shot in the right arm last night in the home of her aunt, Margaret Welsh, 35 years old, 202 South Lincoln street. The girl said a man she did not know knocked at the kitchen door and fired when she admitted him. The police advanced a theory that the bullet was intended for Miss Welsh. They recalled that she was fired on by men who went to her house on Nov. 29. She was once a witness in the Granady murder trial. Louis Bangora, 918 South Claremont avenue, was taken into custody for questioning after last night's shooting.

SEARCH BY AIR AND LAND FOR MISSING AVIATOR IS FUTILE

Marlinton, W. Va., Dec. 27.—(AP)—Two United States army planes and 400 hundred men searched West Virginia's rugged mountains late today for the plane of Lieut. E. H. Bobbitt Jr., 24, missing army flyer, but found no trace of it.

A report that Bobbitt's plane and body had been found two miles north of here was unconfirmed.

The young lieutenant disappeared Friday while flying from Selfridge field, Mich., to Hot Springs, Va., to spend the holidays with his parents.

A Marlinton youth said he saw an airplane fall in flames on Butler mountain, six miles south of here, Friday night, but Capt. E. C. Whitehead, in charge of the flyers searching for Bobbitt, said he had been unable to verify the statement.

Had Bobbitt's plane fallen, it could not be seen easily from the air, army flyers said, because frost and snow gathering on the wings would camouflage it.

ROB WOMAN IN STORE.

Two armed men entered the delicatessen store of Mrs. Gertrude Richmond at 2100 Barry avenue last night and robbed her of $60. Her husband, Louis, asleep in the rear of the store, was not awakened.

URGES PURCHASE OF TAX WARRANTS TO RESCUE CITY

Only widespread individual investment in municipal securities can extricate the city from its financial troubles is the opinion of D. F. Kelly, chairman of the citizens' committee for sale of tax anticipation warrants. No legislation can accomplish its purpose immediately, he points out, and until it can only the coöperation of the citizens can suffice.

In the December issue of the Chicago Union Teacher, out today, Mr. Kelly says, in part:

"Were a foreign army encamped about our city with every prospect of being able to destroy it unless a huge indemnity were paid, immediate steps would be taken to secure from those able to pay a guarantee of the amount demanded that their property might be saved.

"A like condition now exists in that the integrity of our financial structure in peril.

"How can Chicago be extricated from its financial morass? The answer is simple: customer ownership. Every citizen of this great community should be a stockholder in the city of Chicago in proportion to his or her means. It is said that several hundreds of millions of dollars are in safety deposit vaults of this and other cities—helping no one. This money could be invested in securities."

FOUR HURT WHEN CONGRESSMAN'S AUTO IS WRECKED

Granata's Brother Injured in Drive Crash.

An automobile owned by Congressman Peter C. Granata and driven by his brother crashed into a safety island in the inner drive at Congress street early this morning, injuring its four occupants. They are:

J. Charles Granata, 30 years old, of 782 Bunker street, a brother of the congressman; Joseph Rocco, 38, of 762 Gilpin place, an automobile salesman; Miss Lena Pellegrino, 23, of 4516 West Van Buren street, and Miss Mary Scardina, 35, employed in a café at 1014 South Halsted street. All four were taken to St. Luke's hospital and were said to be in serious conditions. Physicians said Miss Scardina would die.

The Granata car was going south in the drive when it cracked up against the island, crushing in the front of the machine and hurling Miss Scardina through the windshield. The congressman was not in the car.

Two Killed in Lake County.

Two Chicago men were killed yesterday when their automobile skidded on a curve and overturned in a ditch at Ivanhoe, four miles west of Libertyville, in Lake county.

The victims were Arthur Hess, 22 years old, 1922 North Tripp avenue, and Walter Johnson, 29 years old, 515 Galt avenue. Gould Offenbacker, a third member of the party, who escaped serious injury, told authorities that the trio were on their way to Fox lake.

Martin Meskowski, 19 years old, 1440 Fifth avenue, Chicago Heights, died yesterday in St. James hospital there of injuries suffered on Christmas eve when he was struck by a car driven by Joseph Petricek of Chicago Heights. Meshowski was walking on the Lincoln highway.

County Total Now 1,279.

The death of Meshowski raised the 1931 motor death toll in Cook county to 1,279.

Morris Taxey, 45 years old, of Pittsburgh, was killed and five other persons were hurt in a head-on automobile crash in Indiana, route 41, 10 miles south of Hammond, yesterday. The injured are Taxey's brother, George, and George's wife, Lillian also of Pittsburgh, and Mr. and Mrs. Jasper Grimaldi, and their son, Albert, of 364 East 26th street, Chicago. George Taxey swerved his machine into the wrong lane to avoid a car which had halted suddenly and crashed into the Grimaldi car.

Six persons were injured last night when two automobiles collided at 84th street and Phillips avenue. They are Ralph Pettit, 24 years old, 7612 Phillips avenue, and Richard Goldici, 30 years old, 7251 South Oakley avenue, the drivers; Edward Groth, 19 years old, 1141 East 73d street; Louis Rich, 29, and Mrs. Katherine Rich, 27, of 7259 South Oakley avenue, and Robert Devine, 32, of 8148 Luella avenue.

2 GIRLS HELD IN POLICE SLAYING; GANG CONFESSES

Round Up Young Killers of Detective Caplis.

slow in fleeing, dropped the policeman from behind.

The first clew which assisted in solving the crime came from a Checker taxi driver whose name is withheld. He said that two girls were involved in the robbery. He told the police that he was seized by the robbers and forced up the stairs to the second floor cafe. Two girls went up also, he said.

"Shooting started suddenly," the chauffeur said. "I saw the two girls each fire a revolver into the floor. Then I ran."

New Clew Is Obtained.

The next information came from a railroad switchman whom police describe as a stool pigeon. His act revealed a neat bit of double crossing with Marcella and Dorothy as the victims. On Monday night, 12 hours after the shooting, the girls went to his apartment. "Here, put these guns away," he said they told him. Several nights later he went to Milwaukee as part of his railroad duties, and there told police of the gun incident, adding the address of Dorothy in Congress street as further information.

At that address Chief Shoemaker and Storms encountered Anna Evans, sister of Dorothy. In Anna's purse they found a letter written by Genevieve Royce, 14 year old sister of Marcella, which stated: "You are breaking dad's and mother's hearts. I've got enough on you to send you to the electric chair." Anna was questioned, but maintained a sullen silence. Several days ago, however, she hinted that Freeman might know something about the Caplis slaying.

One Already in Custody.

Freeman was already in custody, but on suspicion for other crimes. He had been seized Monday by Deputy Chief Storms on telephone advice that he was a "participant in a bank robbery." He proved an alibi and was discharged in the police court the following day. But again anonymous information involved him. Another call mentioned that Freeman shared in "an important crime."

Schoemaker, Storms and others questioned him all Christmas night and Saturday. He weakened finally, and named Burlison, Pape, Bruno and the Royce and Evans girls. All were seized promptly. Burlison and Marcella were found, it was said, in a flat hideout at 4412 West Monroe street. It was known, however, that Lieut. Sullivan spent all day Sunday seeking him in Vassar and Saginaw, Michigan.

Freeman and Burlison told similar stories, both placing the girls in the cafe during the shooting, though Burlison did not back up Freeman in quoting "Rocco the Barber" as saying that Marcella shot Policeman Caplis. Pape and Bruno had made incomplete admissions up to last night. The girls confessed that they accompanied the bandit party, but they insisted they stayed in the hallway and never went upstairs into the restaurant proper.

Leader Tells His Story.

Freeman's story was that he had planned to lead another gang in the robbery, but the first gang deserted at the last moment. Then he recruited the second band. They gathered in his apartment the night before the shooting. There he furnished guns, which he got from one of the three men still at large. The girls, Freeman declared, were taken along as "fronts," to ward off suspicion.

"Bruno suggested that we take the girls along so that we could get into the place without arousing suspicion," confessed Freeman in going over the pre-robbery gathering. "So I gave each of them a revolver. When we went in Bruno and I had shotguns. There were seven men all told. One of them went up first to see if there were any police around. He came down and gave us the okay. Six of us and the girls went up. Burlison covered the orchestra and I covered a little Chinaman I knew had custody of the safe."

After the shooting, in which he mentioned the reported statement of "Rocco the Barber" accusing Marcella, Freeman and his confederates escaped in two automobiles, and went to a speakeasy in the 1400 block, Van Buren street, run, he said, by Jimmie Adducci, west side hoodlum, where they ate.

Marcella returned home about 2:45 o'clock that morning. There she was spanked by her mother for "staying out late." She left home that morning as usual, but had first packed personal effects. That evening her parents received a note from her stating "she was married," and not to worry.

Investigation at the homes of Marcella and Dorothy revealed a contrast. Marcella, daughter of John H. Royce, stationary engineer, and his wife, a milliner, apparently had good home advantages. The apartment was found to be comfortably furnished and in a good residential district.

The home of Dorothy suggested poverty. She is one of seven children of an unemployed father. The Evans home last night was unlighted, the gas and electricity being shut off for nonpayment of bills.

THEATER ROBBER CAUGHT

A nervous robber of collegiate type, who tried to hold up a girl ticket seller at the Cort theater, 132 North Dearborn street, was pursued last evening by Max Franks, an actor, and was captured after a chase of about a block by Traffic Policeman Theodore Klank.

After going up to the ticket window and asking a question about the purchase of seats, the robber left the lobby. He returned a few minutes later and thrust a pistol at Miss Dolly Joy, the ticket seller, warning her not to scream.

Miss Joy disregarded the order. Her cries frightened the robber and he stuck the pistol in his pocket and fled. In the lobby at the time was Franks, who has a juvenile part in "Ten Nights in a Barroom," now playing at the Cort. He followed the robber to the street.

As the fugitive turned into an alley just south of the theater and fled toward Clark street, Franks shouted for help. He was heard by Policeman Flank, who stationed himself at the Clark street entrance to the alley and was waiting when the robber arrived.

The outlaw offered no resistance and was taken to the First district station, where he was questioned by Lieut. Louis Klatzco. He said that he was Harry C. Richmond, 19 years old, and that he had come to Chicago from Denver only two days ago.

"I was cold and hungry," he added, "and this was my first holdup. I guess I don't know how to do this work."

Another loop holdup was that of the North Western Bus lines' ticket office at 12 South La Salle street. Two armed men entered and compelled Manly Kobbe and Howard Watt, employes, to turn over the money in the cash drawer and in a safe, a total of $422. Two patrons who had entered to buy tickets were told to remain quiet, but were not robbed. Three weeks ago the same office was robbed of $800.

17 SUMMONED FOR HEARING TODAY ON SMOKE VIOLATIONS

Frank A. Chambers, chief city smoke inspector, will hold a hearing in his office today to which seventeen householders and representatives of business concerns have been summoned to appear. They will be called upon to explain the emission of dense smoke from their house chimneys and plant or office building stacks. Those summoned are:

Oriel Furnished apartments, 843 East Garfield boulevard.
General Electric Supply corporation, 350 North Ogden avenue.
Schultz & Hirsch Co., 1300 Fulton street.
Coliseum building, 1513 South Wabash avenue.
L. E. Lilly, 6909 South Halsted street.
E. Paresi, 343 South Trumbull avenue.
E. Anderson, 343 South Trumbull avenue.
A. L. Miltenberg, 33 South Clark street.
Rakios Restaurant, 1200 North Clark street.
Anion Piasecki, 2738 North Menard avenue.
S. Salk, 3604 West 26th street.
C. Christenson, 7131 South Damen avenue.
Beehive Laundry, 2043 West Van Buren street.
Frank S. Bets Co., 634 South Wabash avenue.
Cockran & McCluer, 440 Barry avenue.
A. Aswcanza, 1834 South Central Park avenue.
A. M. La Chappelle, 7823 Luella avenue.

The smoke clouds issuing from the stacks were noted by the deputy inspectors last week, but no hearings were held by Chambers on Thursday and Saturday as his contribution to the holiday spirit. Remedies for correcting the defects in boiler operation that produce the smoke are suggested by Chambers at the hearings.

DIES WHILE TAKING STROLL.

William B. Allen, 70 years old, owner of a rooming house at 2024 Monroe street, died of heart disease yesterday while taking a morning stroll in front of 13 South Seeley avenue.

FINLAND TO VOTE ON FATE OF DRY LAW TOMORROW

Three Alternatives Appear on Ballot Sheets.

HELSINGFORS, Finland, Dec. 27.—(AP)—Prohibition will be weighed in the balance in a nation-wide referendum Tuesday and Wednesday.

The nation's voters will be asked, 13 years after legal abolition of the liquor traffic, whether or not they want it back.

Three Alternatives on Ballot.

Three alternatives will appear on the ballot sheets, and the voter will mark which he or she prefers. They are:

1. Extension of prohibition in its present form.
2. Modification to permit 12 per cent alcohol wines and malt brews of 3.2 per cent alcohol.
3. Repeal of the present laws and authorization to the government to proceed with a system of state regulated importation, manufacture and sale of all alcoholic beverages.

Votes of Finnish women will be counted separately from those of the men. To facilitate this women will use red ballots, men white. Ballots will be marked with either red or black pencils. Citizens 24 years of age and over may vote.

Goes Dry with Independence.

Prohibition had its inception in Finland shortly after the nation, long united with monarchist Russia, set itself up as an independent republic. Its advocates won their campaign on the increasing number of arrests for drunkenness and other abuses which had grown up under former conditions.

The principal arguments used by the anti-prohibitionists since that time, particularly during the last year, have been a further increase in drunkenness as revealed by statistics on arrests, and growth of liquor smuggling. Smuggling, it is stated, has become a considerable industry, not only among Finnish nationals but with Germans, Swedes, Norwegians and even Britons participating.

Its opponents now argue that prohibition has failed to cure the very evil of drunkenness which it was devised to meet; that smuggling has defeated the prohibition laws and turned to other sources millions of marks in excise tax revenue which the government could have collected on legal sales of alcohol.

HIGH TAXES FORCE GERMAN PRINCE TO SELL ESTATE

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, Dec. 27.—Germany's richest landowner in pre-war days, Prince Friedrich Victor of Hohenzollern-Sigmaringen, is the latest victim of the world's crisis. High taxation has forced him to sell his entire landed property in Pomerania, eight separate estates, totaling 13,500 acres, for about $500,000.

The estates will be converted into 300 small farms by the "Bauernhof Settlement company." Another $700,000 will be spent for the erection of farm buildings and for electricity and a water supply.

Prince Friedrich is the head of the Catholic branch of the Hohenzollern family. His wife is Princess Margarethe, oldest daughter of the king of Saxony.

Brazil Firm to Colonize 5,000 Rumanian Families

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BELEM, Brazil, Dec. 27.—Five thousand Rumanian families will be brought to Brazil to live if a colonization scheme now being negotiated by representatives of a private Brazilian banking firm are successful. The banking company plans to offer the Rumanians sites on a 2,500,000 acre concession in the state of Para. Agricultural labor leaders in Rumania are being dickered with in connection with the proposed colonization.

"RAZOR" KEEN, A SLEUTH WHO USED DISGUISES, QUITS

LONDON, Dec. 27.—(AP)—Detective Inspector William "Razor" Keen, who belonged to the school of disguises, retired today after 27 years' service in the metropolitan police force, and London's underworld breathed a sigh of relief. Inspector Keen was one of the best known sleuths Scotland Yard has produced and he made himself a terror to evildoers in the vast slum area of southeast London of which he had charge.

Unlike most of his colleagues but in keeping with the heroes of fiction, he was a great believer in disguise and had the ability to fit a different voice to each of his many roles.

One of the most famous of his exploits was the recovery of a string of pearls bought in London for the queen of Siam at an estimated price of $50,000 and stolen in transit to Bangkok. He arrested the thief in London on a tip from Singapore after police of two continents had searched for three years.

SYRIANS RENEW RIOTS; 4 KILLED, SCORES INJURED

JERUSALEM, Dec. 27.—(AP)—An exchange telegraph dispatch from Beirut said today that four persons were killed and scores injured in a renewal of rioting at Aleppo, Syria, which has been virtually under martial law for four days.

Four persons were killed and many wounded in rioting at Damascus a week ago in connection with elections to the Syrian parliament.

The rioting was attributed to partisan bitterness and not to anti-French sentiment. The French have a mandate over Syria. Similar incidents occurred at Hama, but Aleppo then was peaceful.

TRIAL OF STATE AUDITOR TO BE RESUMED TODAY

Prosecution to Add Bank Records to Evidence.

The trial of Oscar Nelson, state auditor, on a charge of misfeasance in office, will be resumed this morning before the jury in the court of Judge Edward Shurtleff at Woodstock.

State's Attorney A. V. Smith of Lake county, chief prosecutor in the case, announced yesterday that he would commence the presentation of documentary evidence relating to the financial condition of the Waukegan State bank.

Mr. Nelson is charged with having been remiss in his duty to the depositors of the bank when he failed to close the institution in September, 1930, after his examiners had made an investigation of the bank's condition.

1930 Conference Described.

Up to the present the state has offered evidence concerning a conference between Auditor Nelson and directors of the Waukegan bank in October, 1930, after the examiners had made a report. At that time, according to testimony, the directors pleaded with the auditor not to close the bank and not to levy a stock assessment. They claimed in the conference that the bank was sound, the evidence showed.

Col. Smith said the next phase of the case would be to introduce into evidence all records showing assets of the bank which were worthless or of doubtful value. The state expects to prove that the bank was insolvent in September, 1930, and that in failing to order the bank closed Mr. Nelson was guilty in allowing the assets to be dissipated during the nine succeeding months before he closed the bank.

Stengers to Identify Records.

Among the witnesses expected to identify the bank records formally before the jury are Carl Stenger, chairman of the bank's board; Richard Stenger, his son; Fred B. Whitney, receiver for the bank appointed by the state auditor; and Lloyd Fackman, former clerk at the bank, now a national bank examiner.

It was declared by members of the prosecution staff that all the evidence thus far submitted is intended simply to pave the way for pertinent evidence which the state claims will involve Mr. Nelson more directly. The defense, represented by Attorneys David R. Joslyn Sr. of Woodstock, R. K. Welsh of Rockford, and Joseph Pieck of Chicago, holds that Mr. Nelson acted in good faith in an effort to avert a costly bank closing.

Judge Asks Assembly Action to Protect Bank Deposits

Circuit Judge Michael Feinberg, who for the last eight weeks has been conducting hearings to aid bank receivers to recover assets of closed banks, made public yesterday a letter he had written to Gov. Emmerson urging the appointment of a legislative committee to probe the state banking situation with a view to revamping the present Illinois banking act.

JUDGE FEINBERG.

Conditions discovered in sixty banks, concerning which he has conducted hearings, demonstrate that the safeguards now afforded bank depositors are woefully inadequate, the judge asserted. He offered to appear before any committee the governor might appoint to reveal some of the conditions coming under his observation.

"As a result of the hearings before me upwards of $480,000 has been collected for the benefit of depositors of closed banks," the judge wrote. "Coincident with the hearings there was necessarily developed an amazing condition of affairs respecting the internal management of these banks, conditions which indicate clearly the need for protection in the future for depositors of banks—something that is woefully lacking in our present banking laws.

"Unless better protection is afforded the depositors of banks than is possible under the present banking act there is no guarantee against a repetition of these practices.

"May I presume sufficiently to suggest that in my opinion a committee of the house and senate be appointed by the present session of the legislature, empowered to investigate these closed banks and be prepared to submit a comprehensive report to the next regular session of our legislature.

"My thoughts being that this work could be finished in time for the next regular session of the legislature, so that needed legislation may be adopted without delay, I would be perfectly willing to give such a committee the benefit of my time and the information gathered in the hearings had before me."

This morning Judge Feinberg will resume his investigation of the closed Sheridan Trust and Savings bank. Among witnesses to be heard will be David H. Jackson, former chairman of the Illinois commerce commission; his brother, Andrew Jackson, and a number of north side business men, all of whom are indebted to the bank.

DRYS TO ABANDON DRESS SUIT IDEA ON EVE OF 1932

The plan of sending forth prohibition agents in dinner jackets will not be followed on New Year's eve this year, according to Al Aman, chief enforcement officer.

Heretofore the drys have been assigned to occupy tables in the various cabarets, accompanied by women. In recent years, however, the better class amusement palaces have not been molested, despite the open drinking of liquor.

The plan of attempting to disguise the prohibition agents is being abandoned, it is said, because of its futility. The agents, visibly awkward in rented suits, with ill fitting collars and ties that insist upon the diagonal, have been about as convincing in such a rôle as a street corner Santa Claus.

This year a squad of drys will be assigned to each police precinct, ready to act if they have to.

MEXICAN FANS PROTEST 'GOAT GLAND' STATION

MEXICO CITY, Dec. 27.—(AP)—Various Mexican radio listeners, headed by a lawyer, Manuel Ruis Sandoval, have protested to Gov. Ortis Garza of Coahuila against radio station XER at Villa Acuna, which is used by John R. Brinkley, Kansas "goat gland specialist."

The protest, a copy of which was sent to the department of the interior, said the station was being used for the broadcasting of "Yankee imperialistic propaganda" which was contrary to Mexico's nationalistic campaign. It is said that most of the broadcasting was in English and that practically all the employes and artists used were Americans.

Brinkley set up the station at Villa Acuna, just across the Rio Grande from Del Rio, Tex., after the United States radio commission had canceled his permit to operate a station at Milford, Kas., on the ground that it was inimical to the public health because of his radio prescriptions for various ailments.

SPIRITED LEGAL BATTLE LOOMS IN CANAL TRIAL

Expect Defense Fight on Contract Evidence.

First Assistant State's Attorney John E. Northup, who is in charge of the prosecution of Timothy J. Crowe, president of the sanitary district board during the whoopee period of 1927-1928, and seven of his former associates, expects a spirited battle with the defense this week when he tries to introduce the first of his evidence concerning alleged graft in sanitary district contracts. The evidence on the $1,100,000 cinder bridle path adjoining the north shore channel road will be started when the trial is resumed this morning after the Christmas holidays.

The cinder path testimony, the prosecutor said, probably will not disclose any direct graft evidence. The testimony to be presented by the prosecution on this subject will be based on a charge of diversion of money through extravagance for a needless project. The prosecution charges that the sanitary trustees had no authority to build the bridle path and that there was no excuse for them squandering more than $1,000,000 of the taxpayers' money for the accommodation of a few horse owners.

Count Quashed by Judge.

Chief Justice Harry Fisher of the criminal court, and Judges John Prystalski and James J. Kelly, who are sitting with him in an advisory capacity, quashed the count covering the cinder path project. However, Prosecutor Northup expects to get his evidence into the record under the general diversion count.

The evidence to follow that on the cinder path porject will pertain to other contracts and is expected to disclose payments of huge sums by favored contractors. The prosecutor hopes to prove these charges mostly by circumstantial evidence. He will show, he says, that at the same time that sums as high as $100,000 were withdrawn from the bank by certain contractors and charged to expenses, the bank accounts of some of the defendants showed correspondingly large deposits.

If the defense lawyers can limit the prosecution on the cinder path evidence, it is expected that they will consider this a good start in a move to prevent the state from producing the evidence on the other contract phases of the case, in which the state believes it can prove the graft charges.

Seeks Defendant's Testimony.

Prosecutor Northup announced yesterday that he would try to present testimony from John T. Miller, former head of the permanent plants and structures department of the district and one of the defendants, which would be against himself and the other defendants. Miller testified before a grand jury a month ago under an immunity waiver.

Mr. Northup says that Miller's statements before the grand jury are admissible as evidence in the present trial and he will ask that the stenographer who took down the testimony be allowed to take the witness stand and read his notes. The defense probably will resist this procedure, it is reported, on the ground that a man cannot be compelled to testify against himself and further on the ground that grand jury testimony is secret.

TWO INJURED AS PLANE CRASHES ON 'LAST' FLIGHT

Two men were injured, one of them seriously, when an airplane in which they were making a "last flight" crashed yesterday afternoon at 53d street and Cicero avenue.

The pilot, Albert Schlossberg, 26 years old, 6314 South Rockwell, street, escaped with bruises and cuts, but his passenger, John Jachera, 22 years old, 11729 South Sangamon street, suffered a broken leg and a fractured jaw.

Both were taken to the Little Company of Mary hospital, where their injuries were treated by Dr. Paul Headland. Schlossberg was taking a "last flight" after having sold his half interest in the plane. He said he was stunting when the plane went out of control.

GERMANY FINDS PAY OF ITS TRADE BARONS STILL FAT

Bruening Acts to End High Salary Waste.

BY SIGRID SCHULTZ.
(Chicago Tribune Press Service.)

BERLIN, Dec. 27.—On one topic most leaders of German industry and finance are united—they join in loud choruses to proclaim that a prerequisite to the economic salvation of the reich must be the further sinking of reducible "production costs" to the end that it may remain competitively fit and able to maintain a heavily favorable balance of foreign trade even in the depression.

Meanwhile, with dividends dwindling, large German concerns are continuing to spend vast sums in top-heavy salaries for directors and bulky supervisory boards, certain economists charge.

Not more than 21,500 Germans—or less than one-half of one per cent of the total population—earn between them $625,000,000, which is about one-twelfth of the national income. This, these experts say, explains to a great extent the dead weight of administrative salary expenses crippling German industry at the present moment.

Germans Become Irked.

"Germans themselves are growing highly dissatisfied with this situation. They cite concrete cases and charge that General Director Koettgen and Francke of the Siemens company each receive nearly $250,000 a year.

Friedrich Karl von Siemens is known to have a salary of almost $200,000 a year. Economists believe it is more. The other members of the board draw a total of about $1,250,000 between them, or roughly $125,000 each. No less than thirteen additional directors are paid between $50,000 and $37,500 apiece.

"Even before the war, Siemens was by no means an infant industry. Its sales were half of what they are now; yet it managed to grow under a general director, who received a salary of $2,500 a year with an additional $8,000 in bonuses. The rest of the directors received $3,000 and $4,000.

Cost of Directors High.

In 18 years the company's business increased 100 per cent, while the general directors' salaries increased more than 4,000 per cent. In other words, from $3,750,000 to $5,000,000 more is swallowed up annually in the cost of directors than before the war.

In the meantime, the firm has announced that its profits for the year would not be satisfactory because it had been impossible to reduce personnel costs sufficiently. The directors have promised to reduce them. But they are making no move to begin at the top.

The general director of the Rhine-Westphalia trust is reported to receive $180,000. Former Chancellor Cuno, chief of the Hamburg-American Line, gets $150,000. Heads of the "Inag," I. G. dye trust, and Ruhr mining trust are paid $120,000, $120,000, and $100,000 respectively. Herr Voegler of the steel trust also draws $100,000 in salary alone.

In most cases the industrial barons have further incomes from their memberships in the boards of supervisors or of directors of other corporations, besides their stock dividends.

The members of the board of directors of the big "Deutsche Bank" rate $87,000 a year. The directors of the Krupp corporation receive $30,000. Even the Reichsbank's directors draw $25,000, while President Luther's checks total $45,000.

Beside big business, the administration of reparations yields fat salaries to captains of industry and banks. The world bank at Basel pays President Quesnay of France $50,000 a year; its vice president, $40,000; its general director, $30,000; its associate general directors, $28,000.

One scheme alone has swallowed millions of the money Germany borrowed abroad. It is the "supervisory board." Its members meet once or twice a year to examine current business activities, the financial standing and activities of the companies for whose safe and sane administration they are supposed to be militant guarantors.

Decree Hits Supervisors.

Time and again in the last few months, banks and corporations have run into serious—and scandalous—difficulties involving misadministration, despite the fact that they had expensive supervisory boards.

Hence the recent emergency decree which Chancellor Bruening's cabinet issued, increasing the responsibility of the supervisors, and also limiting the number of such fatly paid posts.

The government also levied a special tax on sums paid to supervisors. Most supervisors receive $5,000 a year. The boards are now limited to a maximum of 20 members.

Even now an ordinary supervisory board may cost a corporation $100,000 a year.

Now that many companies are compelled to turn to the government for help, the government has discovered that big sums are being paid to directors and supervisors. A general reorganization of top salaries is promised.

TAHITIAN WHO CIRCLED GLOBE IN TINY CRAFT SAILS FOR HOMELAND

New York, Dec. 27.—[Special.]—Among the passengers of the liner Virginia, which sailed yesterday for the west coast, was a shy little man who kept very much to himself in the smoking salon. He was Etera, pearl diver, navigator, banana grower and man-of-all-work, who set out for his home in Tahiti after sailing thousands of miles in a 32-foot ketch and spending a month in New York.

Etera, who is 48 years old and a native of Papeete, was the "crew" of the Ketch Svaap, in which William Albert Robinson of Boston sailed around the world.

When he returned to New York last November, both he and Etera were officially received at the city hall. Robinson left for his home. Etera remained here.

Two outstanding events marked his stay in New York. One was a ride in the subway. The other was a musical comedy, with two Tahitian girls dancing in languorous rhythm. Etera recognized Reri and Mary, the south seas dancers who made a hit in the last Ziegfeld follies.

The skyscrapers and other wonders of the large American city were no novelty to Etera, but to see Reri and Mary was something for which he had not been prepared.

Reri, he said, is the daughter of a former chief of police. Her real name is Jeanne. Mary is just "a nice girl."

Etera managed to find the dancers' dressing room. The meeting was joyous, and for the first time in many months Etera could chatter away.

PREMIER INSISTS JAPAN DOES NOT WANT MANCHURIA

Would Cost Too Much to Rule and Guard It.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

TOKIO, Dec. 28.—[Monday.]—Premier Tsuyoshi Inukai, interviewed aboard a train last night en route to the grand shrine of Ise, near Osaka, to report the installation of the cabinet to the spirits of the sun goddess, Amaterasu, divine and historical imperial ancestress, declared the Chinese have the idea that Japan aims to take Manchuria and transform it into a second Corea.

"Japan would not take Manchuria as a gift," he said. "We could not, in the first place, afford the expense of maintaining a frontier guard, and it would cost too much, moreover, to establish a formal administration.

"In fact, if China would offer Manchuria to us we would decline the offer with thanks. If, for argument's sake, Manchuria were our territory today, we would give it to China and ask nothing in return. China can keep Manchuria with our compliments.

What Makes a Bandit.

"The difference between Chinese bandits and Chinese troops is only a hair's breadth. To change Chinese troops into bandits it is only necessary to take off their military uniforms. Japan has no intention of attacking Chinese regulars, but, while suppressing bandits, she has lost the power to distinguish bandits from troops, as there is practically no difference."

The premier blamed Japanese papers for playing up the news that the United States warned Japan to take no aggressive action toward Chinchow. He declared this is not true, but as a result of the newspapers printing such statements the Chinese have begun taking a bolder front and causing more trouble. He declared that Americans and Europeans have an idea that Japan wishes to close the open door in Manchuria.

"This is absolutely unfounded," he said. "In fact, Japan welcomes with open arms any move on the part of outsiders to invest money there."

U. S. Business Men Protest.

TOKIO, Dec. 28 [Monday].—(AP)—A protest by American Ambassador W. Cameron Forbes on behalf of American business interests in Manchuria was filed with the Japanese government just prior to the retirement of Baron Shidehara as foreign minister, it was announced today.

The protest accused the Japanese of putting foreigners at a disadvantage, it was announced. At the same time, Ambassador Forbes expressed the United States government's concern regarding the "open door" policy.

The ambassador reiterated to Tsuyoshi Inukai, the new premier, last week the complaints of Americans in Manchuria.

Seize 24 for Smuggling Arms to Chinese General

MOSCOW, Dec. 27.—A Shanghai report, published here today, said 24 men had been arrested at Dairen, Manchuria, on a charge of smuggling ammunition to Gen. Ma Chan-shan, Manchurian commander recently defeated by Japanese forces. Dairen police were quoted as saying the group included a Frenchman named Bacry and a Japanese named Takusimo. They were alleged to be members of an international band of arms smugglers with headquarters at Dairen.

Cadillac

Will present its Greatest Achievement

FOUR COMPLETELY NEW LINES OF MOTOR CARS

Two years ago, with the announcement of the Cadillac V-16, the Cadillac Motor Car Company began the most far-reaching program of development in its history—a program that called for a completely new approach to the entire problem of fine-car designing. Today, this program has been carried to its completion, and the results will be announced within a few days. Embracing all four lines of Cadillac's distinguished family—the La Salle V-8, the Cadillac V-8, the Cadillac V-12, and the Cadillac V-16—this announcement will be by far the most important that Cadillac has ever made. In fact, it will herald a higher standard of motor car transportation than the world has had any reason to anticipate.

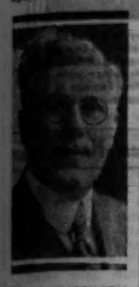
DIVORCES DROP 22% AS RESULT OF DEPRESSION

7,806 Granted in County During Present Year.

The effect of economic depression upon the divorce trend in Cook county was evidenced yesterday in computations made public by Thomas O. Wallace and Frank V. Zintak, clerks, respectively, of the Circuit and Superior courts. Only 7,806 divorces have been granted thus far, with 1931 almost at an end, as compared with 10,100 during 1930. The decrease amounted to 22 per cent.



T. O. WALLACE. [Wallingre Photo.]

In the Circuit court 3,312 decrees have been granted as compared with 3,746 during 1930. In the Superior court there were 4,494 decrees granted during 1931 while 6,354 were signed during 1930.

Six Wives to One Husband.

Last year three wives were given decrees for every husband who gained his freedom. During 1931, however, this ratio became six wives to every husband, the figures show. The courts parted one of every 136 families in the county during each 68 minutes of the year, the tables also disclose.

Of the decrees themselves the statistics reveal nearly a seven per cent decrease has occurred in the number in which alimony is allowed by the courts. The day of alimony gold digging has ceased, the officials stated, the judges during 1931 having adopted the practice of allowing support money only to women with children.

$2,818,038 Paid in Alimony.

Alimony paid during 1931 aggregated $2,818,038 as against $3,037,456 in both courts during 1930. Of this total amount $618,038 was paid in cash settlements, it was estimated, while the remainder, $1,200,000, was promised in weekly or monthly payments.

Most of this money, both the clerks said, was given by judges to support 4,877 children whose parents were legally separated. During 1930, 4,929 children were taken from either wives or husbands and provided for by court order.

In the Circuit court 1,850 children were involved in the divorce suits and 1,337 were taken under the protection of the Superior court. Court attachés estimated that approximately 65 per cent of the couples who obtained legal severance were childless, the remainder having upon an average 3 children.

Last July the period of separation was changed from two years to one as grounds for charges of desertion in divorce bills. After five and one-half months, the court clerks reported that the change has made slight, if any, difference in use of the desertion charge.

In the Circuit court approximately 80 per cent of the bills charged cruelty or desertion. The former, however, gained slightly over 1930 and accounted for 43 per cent of the aggregate. In the Superior court the charge of desertion was increased two per cent. Drunkenness was charged in nine per cent of the bills and adultery in four.

Outdoor Sports

Sunshine and temperatures much higher than normal yesterday attracted many Chicagoans to golf courses and the woods for a day of outdoor sports. A number of golfers teed off on the Lincoln Park course. The organization known as the Polar Bears took their weekly dip at the Sherwin avenue beach with less discomfort than usual at this season.

ROME, Dec. 27.—The sixth International Exhibition of Tripoli will open here March 8, it was announced today. The exhibition is sponsored to demonstrate colonial growth.

PASTOR DRY RAID KILLER SITS IN CELL ON SUNDAY

Palatka, Fla., Dec. 27.—[Special.]—The Rev. E. H. McGaha, pastor of the Palatka Christian church, who shot and killed John L. Malone, while participating in a raid on a still near here, did not occupy his pulpit today.

One reason was that he was confined in the Putnam county jail where he is being held pending investigation of the shooting of Malone. Another was that his congregation was not in an especially receptive mood.

When McGaha sent his regular church announcements to a local paper today, he authorized the statement that he expected to fill his regular Sunday engagements. Shortly afterwards E. L. Strode, lay leader of the church and head of its official board, brought in church announcements advising the congregation that W. J. Thomas would preach.

Strode was diplomatic in evading the direct issue as to whether or not the church had broken with McGaha. He intimated, however, that "the press should publish the latest news."

The shooting of Malone has aroused considerable feeling and the minister has been severely criticized for killing Malone. Whether or not he is being detained as a precaution against possible mob violence, or for fear that friends of Malone might seek revenge has not been stated by Sheriff R. C. Howell.

No charge has been lodged against the minister, however, and he has taken no legal means to secure his liberty.

He is remaining passively in jail at present, pending the finding of a coroner's jury which is due to conduct an investigation on next Friday. McGaha admits having supplied the tip that resulted in the raid in which Malone was killed, being shot in the back as he fled from the posse, composed of McGaha and two deputy sheriffs. He has so far declined to state whether he was acting as a federal undercover agent.

Brazil to Aid Ford in Big Rubber Project in Jungle

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BELEM, Brazil, Dec. 27.—Closer cooperation between the Brazilian government and the Ford Industrial company in the development of Henry Ford's vast rubber plantation was today indicated as a result of a visit by government officials to the site of the project. Work on the enterprise, which entails much clearing of jungle land, was started nearly three years ago near Boa Vista on the Tapajos river.

RULING EXPECTED TODAY IN FACTOR EXTRADITION

Two months after the case was taken under advisement, United States Commissioner Walker is expected to announce today whether John [Jake the Barber] Factor is to be extradited to England. The former west side hair trimmer is accused in England of selling fake stocks in a $7,000,000 swindle.

Arguments in the case, which extended over six months, were concluded the first of November. Commissioner Walker announced he would give an opinion about Nov. 10, but at that time he continued the matter until Dec. 18. Over the protests of counsel for the British crown, another delay was taken, but a ruling was promised for today.

The British embassy, through Chicago counsel, has protested against the privileges accorded Factor.

BALTIC NATIONS FACE POORHOUSE; GRAFT IS BLAMED

Latvia and Estonia Seek New Revenues.

BY DONALD DAY.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

RIGA, Latvia, Dec. 27.—Their thirteenth year of independence will be a fateful one for the Baltic states.

Estonia and Latvia are confronted with budget deficits and are resorting more and more to government monopolies for funds to maintain their huge bureaucracies and inefficient government apparatus.

Lithuania, who began her independence with the poorest prospects of all three countries, is today much better off financially than her neighbors. But she abandoned democracy five years ago and today is being run by a joint dictatorship which is giving the country an honest, economical and efficient government. Now Lithuania is also being drawn into the general European depression and she is also discussing additional monopolies to bring in funds to tide her over hard times.

Business Burdened by Taxes.

In Estonia and Latvia business and industry, burdened with large taxes, is struggling to show a profit while socialistic and paternalistic governments impose fresh restrictions with each meeting of parliament. The morale of the population is shaken. It is the ambition of every boy and girl to get a job on the government pay roll. Instead of economizing by uniting ministries and abolishing departments, the Lettish and Estonian statesmen are racking their brains to discover new ways to form state offices to employ their political supporters.

Civil service is unknown. Pork barrel politics prevail. The small wealthy class and even many business men, are banking their savings abroad. There is not the slightest possibility for either Estonia or Latvia to obtain a foreign loan until they reorganize their finances. The economic outlook is dark.

Plan Tax on Furniture.

The last two Latvian parliaments contained representatives of 26 different political parties in a chamber seating 100 deputies. In their fights and intrigues for ministries, patronage and state jobs the politicians have pumped the country dry. So dry that in the search for new things to tax a communist has proposed taxing upholstered furniture because it is bourgeoise, and another deputy wants to tax canaries.

When Latvia seized the estates and forests of the Baltic barons and Russian nobles she attempted to satisfy the land hunger by creating 69,000 new farms, on which are living 325,000 people. In thousands of cases the peasants cannot pay their taxes, and another law is proposed that when farms are sold under the hammer the dispossessed family shall have the right to keep the last cow. In country markets today good milch cows can be purchased for $8 and fat porkers bring 3 and 4 cents a pound. A wagon load of potatoes costs 60 cents.

Flax Monopoly Loses Millions.

A flax monopoly, established in 1920 when flax was selling for wartime prices, is costing the government hundreds of thousands of dollars annually. Today flax brings $130 per ton and the government has been paying the peasants more than $300 per ton. But this has not helped the farmers to any great extent, for flax is a difficult crop to work and the average acreage for each farm is very small.

Instead of building much needed roads the Letts started to build a navy. Instead of repairing the patched up bridge across the Dvina, blown up in the war, they have decided to build a statue of Liberty, which will take five years to build and will cost about $500,000. Contractors who have done work for the government are being paid in bonds which they cannot sell. And while Riga squandered millions of dollars in erecting a showy market place she has only a half a mile of macadamized roads and has the worst paved streets of any city of her size in Europe. The city is bankrupt and teachers' salaries have not been paid since October.

Estonia Turns Bootlegger.

While Estonian politics is not nearly so dishonest as that of Latvia, still this little country of 1,150,000 population also fears to look into the future. Estonia's morale has also slipped during the past year for today the government is directly implicated in bootlegging alcohol into Finland, her best friend. This smuggling is defended by some political leaders, who say the Estonian peasants must be assisted to sell their main crop, potatoes, and if the Finns are foolish enough to maintain prohibition then they might as well drink Estonian alcohol as German.

Two Women Rule Lithuania.

Lithuania is in a much better position than her two northern neighbors. While it is energetically denied by officials, Lithuania today is being ruled by two sisters, who are ably helping their husbands, President Smetona and Premier Tubelius, to complete the task begun by the exiled and discredited Prof. Waldemaras. Waldemaras' downfall is also traceable to these two women, for he was arrested and exiled because he could not control the tongue of his wife, a French middle class woman, who began to gossip about Mrs. Smetona. Until that quarrel Waldemaras and Smetona had ruled Lithuania jointly. Mrs. Smetona decided she needed help and so she arranged to have her sister's husband, who was then governor of the Memel district, come to Kaunas as premier.

The joint dictatorship of the two sisters, and incidentally their husbands, is a bright spot in northeastern Europe. There are no political parties fighting for spoils and the revenues have been efficiently and honestly used to build railroads, roads, schools and government buildings.

FOUNDER ASKS SCOUTS TO WAR ON CHAIN LETTER

LONDON, Dec. 27.—(AP)—Lord Robert Baden-Powell, founder of the Boy Scout movement, appealed today to scouts throughout the world to destroy any "chain letter" that comes into their hands instead of passing it on.

Describing the "chain letter" practice as senseless and dangerous, he said:

"Letters I have received have threatened me with all sorts of disasters if I disobeyed their instructions. I have destroyed scores of them in my life, but the disasters have never come."

KIN ARE RIVALS FOR PRESIDENCY OF COSTA RICA

The Jimenez Family Has Pair of Entrants.

BY EMILIO ROBERT.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

SAN JOSE, Costa Rica, Dec. 27.—Costa Rica's presidential political campaign is in full swing six weeks prior to the elections which will be held on Sunday, Feb. 14.

Three parties have candidates in the field. They are Ricardo Jimenez, Manuel Castro Quesada and Carlos Maria Jimenez.

While each party declares its candidate a sure winner, many impartial observers believe that no winner will be found when the polls close. They predict a second election must be held on April 5 to choose between the two candidates who received the largest number of votes in the first balloting.

Want One to Drop Out.

Many prominent business men, who dread an additional six weeks of campaigning and uncertainty, are endeavoring to induce the three candidates to agree among themselves as to who should drop out of the race so as to insure a majority to one of their number. But it is quite unlikely that such an agreement be reached.

Ricardo Jimenez, who has already served two terms as chief executive [1910 to 1914 and 1924 to 1928], has the support of the so-called business interests and does not lack funds with which to carry on his campaign. His opponents charge that the Electric Bond and Share company has furnished his party with funds in return for a long term concession which they hope to obtain if he is elected.

Defeated by Incumbent.

Carlos Maria Jiménez, a nephew of the former president, was a candidate for the presidency of Costa Rica in 1928, but was defeated by the incumbent, Cleto Gonzalez Viquez. He has since held a whip hand over the administration by forming a bloc in congress which has opposed many measures recommended by the president.

In the group which he controls in congress are a number of priests and other members of the Catholic church party, led by Dr. Rafael Calderón Muñoz, vice president of congress. His group claims that it represents 29 of the 43 members of the legislative body.

Manuel Quesada, who resigned as minister to Washington to enter the campaign, has the support of the younger Costa Rican element. He is a warm personal friend of President Gonzáles Viques, the latter's son-in-law, Gen. Arturo Quirós, who is minister of public safety, and other members of the military clique. He has served as minister for foreign affairs.

UPON A LYNCHED NEGRO MAY HANG NEXT PRESIDENT

Maryland Is Filled with Political Dynamite.

BY TOM PETTEY.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Baltimore, Md., Dec. 27.—[Special.]—Maryland is packed with dynamite and the spark to set it off may be found in the hearts of some of its citizens and in the court calendars. Gov. Albert C. Ritchie is sitting directly on top of a political munitions heap—and sitting quietly, too,—for fear that any sudden move or loud noise might set his entire eastern shore to pistol popping and rope swinging. Another lynching right now would seriously handicap the Maryland governor's Democratic presidential aspirations. The other may "blow over."

Talks with Gov. Ritchie, William Preston Lane Jr., the attorney general, and other state officials have been singularly unproductive of statements that might be printed behind quotation marks. To disclose the results of their investigations into the mob spirit of the eastern coast now, they believe, would "do more harm than good."

Justice Blind, Deaf, Dumb.

The real reason they have nothing to say is that their investigations have made little headway in pinning the Salisbury lynching on individuals. Justice is frequently referred to as being blind, but justice in a small town after a lynching is deaf and dumb as well. Gov. Ritchie has done all that the law calls for him to do in the present case, but that has not been enough.

Gov. Ritchie received THE TRIBUNE reporter in his office here in the Union Trust building yesterday. He was frankly worried for Maryland and for the effect that this state's internal upheavals would have on his national reputation, but he had no statement to make—yet.

Sparrows Halt Story.

The governor might have been persuaded to talk about the lynching and I might have got the "real story" if a flock of the largest and best fed sparrows in Maryland had not flown into the executive office through an open window. For the next five minutes the governor, his secretary and this reporter were busy chasing birds. Once the sparrows were out, towels were brought in and when they arrived they bore apropriately enough the inscription in bold red letters, "Office of the president." Somehow, the conversation never did get back to the level of lynchings.

A visit to Mr. Lane's office was a pleasant social affair and productive of considerable historical data concerning Maryland's constitutional structure and past achievements and misdeeds. It was not, however, informative as to what steps the state is taking to punish a group of citizens who staged a particularly revolting lynching.

Ritchie in Dilemma.

From other sources a clearer picture of what Gov. Ritchie is doing in his present dilemma was obtained. The governor is handicapped by lack of power to remove elected county officials. He has no real state police force, the seventy-five state policemen being nothing more than traffic guardians without punitive power in an individual county unless specially deputized. In putting Attorney General Lane and his office to work on the lynching case he took the only step possible with the exception of sending the National Guard into the peninsula country.

It is the hope of the governor and his advisers that enough evidence may be obtained to send several names before the grand jury, but they hardly expect to obtain an indictment.

Meanwhile, to add to the governor's dilemma, the Court of Appeals has delayed since Dec. 17 to hand down a decision as to whether Yuel Lee, alias Orphan Jones, the negro farm hand who is charged with having murdered a family of four last October, shall be tried on the eastern shore where the crime was committed or in Baltimore.

Anything Might Happen.

If the court of appeals should turn the Lee case back to the county court and the trial takes place in the rural section of the state anything might happen. Lee is represented by Bernard Ades, an international labor defense attorney with a communistic background.

George Davis, another Negro, will be tried in Elkton—the northern tip of the eastern coast country—on the charge of having attempted to rape a white woman. The Davis trial is set for Jan. 5. Both the Davis and the Lee trials have been long delayed and the only reason, it is said, the defendants have not been lynched is because they are secure in Baltimore city jail.

Gov. Ritchie has publicly announced that he will protect the defendants and the lawyer Ades.

Between Two Extremes.

Gov. Ritchie's friends point out that for him to do more than he has would cost him political support in some southern states where lynching, under certain circumstances, is not frowned upon. On the other hand Pennsylvania Democrats are inclined to criticise Ritchie for an apparent slowness of action. West Virginia is pointing pridefully to two men in jail for its most recent lynching bee.

There has been a minimum of criticism concerning the manner in which the lynching investigation has progressed. The entire affair, a week's survey shows, has gone off at various tangents. Mr. Lane is investigating the Salisbury lynching. Salisbury is delving into "communistic plots" which the town feels is "at the bottom of all the trouble." The international labor defense is said to be "investigating the investigators" and the dry voting Chesapeake coast country has grown so interested in voicing its hate against its Baltimore critics that for the moment it has forgotten what it calls its "bad niggers."

Meanwhile there has been some unorganized criticism against Gov. Ritchie for keeping a Chicago speaking engagement just a day or so after the Salisbury crime. If he had moved fast and firmly then instead of "campaigning," his critics believe, he might have got results.

Taken Back

CHARLES CARONA.

Charles Carona, 28 years old, 5040 Princeton avenue, was arrested yesterday by Sergt. James McCarthy of the detective bureau at the request of Sheriff Michael Welter of La Salle county. The sheriff said Carona was wanted as a suspect in several robberies, in one of which, at Streator, $3,000 was taken.

No Trace Found of Escaped Bank Robber Suspect

Benton Harbor, Mich., Dec. 27.—[Special]—No trace has been found of Albert L. Bates, 38, gunman, of Chicago, alleged pal of Gus Winkler, who with Clarence Cleland, of Three Rivers, escaped in a Christmas night jail break. Bates, alleged robber of the Plano, Ill., bank, was captured Dec. 1 after an auto crash and arrested for drunken driving.

LOST PONY RESTORED TO OWNER.

Policeman William Kenney of the Chicago Lawn district found a pony wandering on his beat early yesterday. It was restored a few hours later to the owner, James J. McPhilling, 4175 Emerald avenue.

THE RACKETEERS OF FARM RELIEF.

The farm board has been annoyed but it has not been endangered by the attacks upon it from grain traders and grain merchants. The few thousand men in the grain trade have relatively little influence in congress. They have proved their case against the board, but their arguments have received scant attention.

Now a much more serious opposition is developing. The farmers themselves are awakening to the fact that the farm board is doing them injury. All through the wheat country, from Texas to Minnesota, but especially in the northwest, coöperative marketing associations had been set up by the farmers themselves long before the farm board was ever thought of and long before there was a half billion dollar revolving fund. Today the members of some of these coöperatives are convinced that the farm board's creature, the Farmers' National Grain corporation, is bent on choking the life out of the smaller coöperatives.

The farm board was created with a view to encouraging the coöperative movement among farmers. The original justification for its so-called stabilization campaign was that by making membership in coöperatives financially attractive the board could the more easily induce farmers to join up. Even that excuse has now been proved a poor one. If the coöperatives which were in existence and flourishing before the farm board was created, the coöperatives which sprang directly from the initiative of the farmers themselves, are in arms against the farm board it may be safely concluded that as an encourager of the coöperative movement the farm board is a good deal of a failure.

Farm relief, unfortunately for agriculture in this country, has become a racket. Before the farm board was created the racket was largely a political one: men who wanted to go to congress or the legislatures wooed the farmers' votes with impassioned speeches about the misfortunes of agriculture and fancy proposals for agricultural relief. Now the farm relievers have something more substantial than legislative proposals to deal with. They have half a billion dollars, or whatever is left of it, at their disposal and with that money they seem determined to gain control of whatever part of the farm marketing machinery can be pried loose.

Maybe the members of the well established coöperatives will benefit from the loss of control over their own marketing facilities; it is significant, however, that many of them are convinced to the contrary. They have risen in revolt against the Farmers' National, which they accuse of bad faith and improper conduct. The farm relievers can not avoid these charges by saying they are inspired by the moneyed interests.

THE LESSON OF AUSTRALIA.

The fate of former Prime Minister Scullin of Australia ought not to be lost on American politicians. A long course of socialistic legislation and expenditure had brought the Australian government steadily nearer bankruptcy. When the world depression reached Australia and continued, this downward progress was rapidly accelerated. Mr. Scullin, like MacDonald and Snowden in England, realized the approaching catastrophe and resorted to the most drastic measures of retrenchment and for the restoration of public credit. He managed by coercion to refund Australian bonds at a lower interest rate and avoided the threat of repudiation in New South Wales by having the central government assume the state debt. But these efforts were too late so far as Mr. Scullin's political fortunes were concerned, and the recent election swept him and his party out of power. The Australian people had had enough of the political rule which had brought them to the rim of disaster. Other more conservative leaders have been given power to carry on a policy of general public economy which Scullin and his party had adopted too late.

This is a phenomenon appearing in many countries now faced with the fate Australia is trying to escape. It will be an astonishing evidence of American political blindness if this lesson is not read in time in the United States. We, too, have been wasting our revenue and piling taxation upon productive enterprise and upon the people. We, too, face an enormous national government deficit and deficits in many local governments. Chicago's conspicuously among the rest. Our people are beginning to understand the plight they are in and its cause, but the politicians are far behind them. It is politics and not public relief which still engages their real interest. Necessary drastic retrenchment is postponed, halfway measures are still dallied with, while we drift toward bankruptcy and chaos in public administration.

It is an incredible situation. Politicians are writing their own political death sentences. The accounting is going to be stern and unescapable. The time for repentance and for saving action is short and growing shorter.

PROPOSED FEDERAL PAY CUTS.

Senator Borah advises congress to make a 10 per cent cut in all federal salaries which may be subject to its action where the pay is above $1,000 a year. The President's salary and the pay of federal judges cannot be reduced during the occupants' terms of office, but the pay rolls otherwise can be trimmed by a determination of congress to reduce costs. When a concern is going broke and wants to survive it must take just the step Senator Borah proposes.

A large part of the bureaucratic structure ought to be torn down for two reasons. It represents an overreaching of defensible federal government enterprise and it is responsible in large measure for the deficits. It is not difficult to extend bureaucracy and create new jobs, but placemen once placed soon develop an invulnerability. Pending the time when the federal government can be reduced to its proper form and size pay cuts are fully justified by the condition in which the federal finances and the federal taxpayers find themselves.

CERTAIN LITTLE ADJUSTMENTS.

Attorney Fink in the sanitary district trial explained to the court certain conditions of political action, introducing his remarks with the statement: "I was told this, and you can take it for what it is worth." What Mr. Fink had been told was that legislatures in the past have endeavored to provide against unemployment by introducing bills to make the sanitary district trustees apprehensive and uneasy. This now seems especially unkind. The sanitary district was everybody's friend. Nevertheless legislative action would be designed to perturb it by what are known as strike bills, if that is the correct term. These bills, Mr. Fink explained, would have "completely hamstrung the operations of the district if enacted."

The sanitary district trustees, desiring to create a friendlier feeling in the legislature, would do so by offering employment to legislators or their friends. This would make the assemblymen feel that the district was governed by lofty purposes and high ideals and the disturbing bills would go to sleep in committee. It may appear strange that any one should think it required an act of the legislature to get a job with the sanitary district. Many citizens found that all they had to do was merely to mention the matter or hardly even that. Any post might bring a job to an unsuspecting person who had not given the probability a thought. One thing the district wasn't. It was not tight with its jobs; far from it. It could point to its record.

Nevertheless legislatures have their own ways of going about things. What will interest the observer of political affairs is the relation which two public bodies seem to have maintained as to each other. When the proper angle of repose had been reached there was an accord, an understanding of mutual helpfulness and service. The legislature could do a great deal for the district. The district could be a great comfort to the legislature. Possibly we should all rejoice that two public bodies operating with and on public funds could so adjust themselves to each other.

DISORDERS IN HAWAII.

An intolerable situation is in the way of being created in Hawaii—the development of a racial antipathy to the navy officers and men with incidents which have provoked the naval personnel to great anger. The rape of the wife of an officer was the worst occurrence. Following the mistrial of the alleged rapists one of them was attacked by men who just stopped short of killing him. Later two sailors were beaten, apparently in retaliation. The officers have aroused civilian resentment by saying that Hawaii is unsafe for their wives.

Local authorities are blamed for laxness and incompetence and marines have been used to preserve order from rioters. The great naval base can't be permitted to have such conditions, with open racial hostilities, conflicts between the natives and the men of the fleet, and lack of protection for women, presenting the anomaly of lack of security where the United States has one of the great outposts of its own security.

Hawaii depends largely on the fleet and the naval base and on tourist trade. The local authorities ought to have sense enough to know that their first job is to create conditions favorable to the navy and the travelers. The travelers can protect themselves by taking Hawaii out of their traveling schedule, and will. If that doesn't bring a correction quickly enough some authority must step in.

Editorial of the Day

A PAUSE TO THINK OVER WHALE KILLING.

[Detroit News.]

Pictures and descriptions of the latest whaling ships, those vessels up to 30,000 tons whose bows open like a vast mouth and swallow carcasses 100 feet long, give sensitive readers the shudders. A consolation in the effects of world-wide depression lies in an abatement of whale killing because of the low price of whale oil. A pause has come in which the interests pursuing whales may agree to limit the future kill and perhaps prevent extermination of the larger species of those interesting fishlike animals.

Building vessels equipped for the polar seas and armed with devices for whale slaughter such as old time whalers never conceived, Scandinavians are the leaders in the revived whaling industry. Recent figures from the U. S. bureau of fisheries put the world catch of whales in 1930 at 27,500, an increase from about 12,000 in 1920. Early day whalers, with their primitive ships and hand thrown harpoons, virtually exterminated the big oil producing whales in all except the more remote oceans. That fact seems proof enough that continuation of the slaughter at the 1930 rate will soon exterminate them even in their farthest polar refuges.

Sentiment alone should bring to bear a sufficient world-wide pressure. As the adults grow to from 60 to 100 feet in length, it is assumed, although their actual life span is not known, that they live to a great age. Observations indicate that the mothers usually bear only one young at a time and breed only once in two years. The rate of reproduction is slow. In part through international action, conservation measures have proved successful with the seal herds. A workable plan to extend real authority over the polar seas and limit whale killing might be evolved and applied.

SORE THROAT—ONE VARIETY.

SORE throat and coryza, or the common cold, are two different diseases. Sore throat is generally due to infection with some one of the varieties of streptococci. Coryza seems to be due to a virus, though soon the process is complicated by the activities of various bacteria. It is exceedingly rare for a sore throat to extend to the nose, causing coryza, or to the chest, causing bronchitis.

It is rare for a coryza to extend to the throat, causing sore throat. It is very likely to spread to the bronchial tubes, and most bad colds end with an acute bronchitis, but the infection, in traveling from the nose to the chest, usually jumps over the tonsil region.

Most of the sore throats are due to infection with the variety known as streptococcus hemolyticus. One very important kind of sore throat is that which comes from infection with streptococcus epidemicus. Drs. Pilot and Davis say we should suspect that this is the infecting microbe whenever a sore throat shows a special tendency to cause complications, such as mastoid abscess, involvement of the ears, rheumatic joints, heart murmurs, acute Bright's disease, peritonitis, enlargement of the neck glands, and any one of several others.

Another peculiarity of this kind of sore throat is that it begins with an attack that runs a fairly mild course and then passes off, only to return about a week or two later in the form of a relapse, with great tendency to cause rheumatism and heart disease.

Another reason for stressing the importance of the sore throat due to this streptococcus is that it is related to the outbreaks of septic sore throat which disturb us so greatly every now and again.

Drs. Pilot and Davis find that people are very prone to become carriers of this coccus. They hold that a considerable part of the population are carriers, and that many of them become such without giving a history of having had sore throat. Most of the carriers do not suspect that they are capable of infecting a milk supply, or harming themselves or any one else. This carrier angle is of more importance to the community than is the acute infection phase of the disorder. When a carrier is a dairyman, or works in a milk plant, he may infect the milk supply, provided the milk is not pasteurized after it is infected. However, Drs. Pilot and Davis think that an epidemic does not result unless every requirement has been met. The carrier, whoever or whatever he is, must infect the udder of a cow. When the milk from an udder thus infected goes into a milk supply that is consumed raw there is liable to be an epidemic of sore throat.

ABOUT BRIGHT'S DISEASE.

G. K. writes:

1. What is Bright's disease?
2. The cause?
3. Can it be found in a young man of 24?
4. What is the relationship of albumin in the urine to this disease?
5. Is it easily cured in a person of the age mentioned, where there are no aggravating factors?

REPLY.

1. Inflammation of the kidneys. There are several kinds of Bright's disease, affecting different parts of the kidney, in different ways, running different courses, and due to different causes.
2. Among the causes are scarlet fever, pneumonia, and other infections, and eating and drinking improperly.
3. Yes. It often is.
4. Albuminuria is one symptom of Bright's disease.
5. Many cases recover spontaneously. Some are cured by treatment. Many result fatally.

FOOD VALUE OF RAW EGGS.

M. R. M. writes: Is there any food value in raw eggs, and if so what? Would one a day be harmful in any way?

REPLY.

Eggs are wholesome and very nutritious. They are rich in proteins and high in calories. The yellows contain vitamins and iron and other minerals. Raw eggs are not quite as wholesome as cooked eggs, and they are not quite so easily digested. We sometimes find a person who is sensitized to eggs and has nettlerash, migraine or other trouble when he eats them.

DRAINING SWAMP LANDS.

Chicago, Dec. 23.—[Friend of the People.]—I have a place in Ozark avenue between Addison street and Cornelia which is always flooded on account of a creek running through there. Now that the city has built a main sewer in Cornelia avenue can't they divert this unsanitary water into the sewer by means of temporary trenches? V. J.

The property mentioned is in the district through which the forest preserve avenue outlet sewer has just been constructed. This district contained considerable areas of swampy land, much of which has been drained by the main sewer construction. Smaller areas cannot be reached until lateral sewers are constructed. Plans for these laterals are being made and proceedings begun as rapidly as petitions are received from property owners. It is expected that most of this will be done this coming year.

A LINE O' TYPE OR TWO

How to the Line, let the quips fall where they may.

NOW WAS IT NICE OF JAPAN to ask our good Secretary Stimson, when he objected to their being in Manchuria, what the heck the U. S. A. was doing in Nicaragua? It was not only unkind but really rude. For what in the world could Mr. Stimson do? It must have been his most embarrassing moment. We can hear him telling somebody or other in Washington: "Honestly, you could have knocked me down with a feather. Oh, I was never so embarrassed in my life!" And from the little Japs, too, who are always bowing so politely and murmuring sugary compliments. We should have thought that if the Japs felt they just had to speak to Mr. Stimson, comparing their army in Manchuria with our marines in Nicaragua, they would have done so something in this fashion: 'Oh, most honorable Stimson, it is indeed that we are desolated and our never-to-be-sufficiently-despised selves grovel in the most hated and abhorred mud that we find ourselves obliged to inflict chastisement on bad, wicked bandits that annoy our honorable army in Manchuria and make faces at honorable army and throw brick and deceased felines at honorable army and steal their pants while they are asleep. You know, oh honorable Stimson, how it is with such disgusting persons as bandits, for have not wicked bandits in a country far removed and called Nicaragua harried and harassed your most honorable self by their wicked actions against your honorable marines? Together, honorable Stimson, must Japan in Manchuria and the honorable United States of America oppose depraved bandits wheresoever they appear, although our hearts are torn and our souls most desolated by same. With affection, we remain, Japan."

HAUNTED.

I should have been home before dusk, but the miller's lad—
The queer one that talks like a silly—
Was telling us tales out of books—of freets, and Bagdad—

"Now, Tom should go bravely—but will he?"—
They laughed, as I went.
Oh, I knew that the meadow road
Was safe as my bed. There was falling

A queer, green twilight. I shivered. Lord—was that a Toad
That was waving, and chuckling, and calling?—

There was a black jackrabbit, with one tired eye,
Walking on two legs like a Christian;
There was a soundless cat that mewed as I went by;
There was a wind, and a mist then
That curled and swirled with a little ghostly breath,
Mouning, and sighing, and seething
With a pitiful, small murmur—as of a very young Death
That might have been lonely, or teething—

There was a fear—or a something I could not trace;
It was either fatal—or funny!—
There was a hope—or a horror—the flash of a face
That was either a hag or a honey!

I was afraid to stay, so I turned and ran,
And the Night—and the Things ran after,
They stuttered, and lisped, and grunted, "Catch him who can!"
I was weak with weeping and laughter.
There were behind, and within, and above, and around me,
Snippets, and yats, and small things
That nudged me, and lipped me, and stung me
wherever they found me,
Wide things, and short things, and tall things—

I screamed when I heard a screech-owl crow—it was not
Like an owl—but a crazy rooster,
And a smiling cow that sat in the road forgot
To rise, and I couldn't boost her
Out of my way. A hoppy-toad curtsied, and swore
At me—but I didn't hear it—for—

Oh!
Oh!!
Oh!!!
There was my door!
And my own white house ran, sobbingly, and met me!
They didn't get me!
They didn't get me!
THEY DIDN'T GET ME!

But, Lord!—they came near it!

There's a snittlefiss caught in my hair, and pfuitt in my ear,
And that lean cow's questioning smile
Will haunt my days with a subtle and delicate fear
That Things may be more than just things—
IF YOU WATCH 'EM AWHILE!

ONE HUNDRED AND THIRTY killed on Christmas day by autos, nine by poisoned hootch, and six by accidental shooting makes us determined to start a movement for a Safe and Sane Christmas next year. There is no reason at all, so far as we can see, why Christmas should not be more an occasion of joy and happiness instead of a constant repetition of the battle of Gettysburg. And, indeed, why not?

AND ANOTHER ILLUSION bites the dust. "Teachers . . . and others in the traditional fields first entered by high grade women workers are least disturbed by the hard times," says an editorial in the sacred New York Times. And they still insist, "When you see it in the Times it's true." Tsk! tsk! tsk!

to us. The 1931 Linebook is sold out. Believe us. We're sorry, but all we can do for the hundreds and thousands of you who keep sending us orders is to return your money. We spent Saturday and Sunday doing just that, and, honest, dearies, it hurts papa more than it does you. But next year order your Linebooks early. As for this year, we can't do anything but sadly repeat:

FROM THE TRIBUNE'S COLUMNS

This nation has had other serious financial depressions, as the following excerpts from The Tribune files reveal. Each of these periods of hard times has been followed by periods of great prosperity.

1873.

Sept. 27.—Chicago became the center of interest and excitement in the financial crisis that is sweeping the nation. At 10 o'clock in the morning it was announced in the clearing house that on account of the extraordinary situation no deposits would for the present be received and no checks would be paid by the following banks: Union National, Cook County National, Second National, Manufacturers' National, and the National Bank of Commerce. In the evening a largely attended meeting of bankers was held in the office of the Clearing House association, among them being Lyman J. Gage, Ira Holmes, B. F. Allen, Chauncey T. Bowen, P. C. Maynard, Sol Smith, P. L. Forrest, J. V. Clark, G. L. Lotus, J. M. Adsit, C. B. Meyer, J. Irving Pearce, Julian F. Rumsey, Mr. Greenebaum, and Mr. Henrotin. A committee was appointed to arrange a plan for issuing loan certificates. The excitement in the city exceeded anything that ever has happened in connection with financial matters here unless it was the utter confusion the first few days after the great fire. The suspension of the Union National bank gave a greater shock to confidence not only in this city but throughout the west than any other incident that has happened since the beginning of the panic. Reports from all over the country indicate intense excitement among bank depositors.

1894.

CHICAGO, Jan. 9.—Whatever there as in the business situation of a satisfactory character is chiefly negative. So far as positive improvement is concerned there is not much that is favorable to report. So far as the actual volume of business now being transacted is concerned, it is probably smaller than it has been at any time during this depression.

1907.

NEW YORK, Oct. 13.—The brokerage firm of Otto Heinze & Co. of New York, responsible for the copper corner and its collapse, was suspended from the stock exchange. Liabilities from $2,000,000 to $3,000,000.

HOUSTON, Tex., Oct. 18.—The House bank here, one of the oldest institutions in Texas, suspended business. The firm has deposits of more than $2,000,000.

1921.

NEW YORK, Jan. 1.—Eight hundred homeless and unemployed men started the new year by sleeping in the pews of one of New York's most historic churches—St. Mark's in the Bowery.

16 YEARS AGO TODAY

DECEMBER 28, 1915.

CHICAGO.—New Year's day will be Thanksgiving and Christmas rolled into one for Pullman conductors and porters on the railroads throughout the United States. The Pullman company announced an increase of $600,000 a year in wages affecting between 8,000 and 9,000 men.

CHICAGO.—Count Stephen B. Spagiari, patron of the arts and organizer of the Italian chamber of commerce in Chicago, died after a brief illness at the age of 59 years.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Hereafter no American citizen may go abroad until he has been formally investigated by the secret service of the government and given permission by the state department to go.

30 YEARS AGO TODAY

DECEMBER 28, 1901.

CHICAGO.—The First National Bank of Chicago announced that it would build on its present site and on land adjacent to the west an office building to exceed in size and outlay any structure in the west, if not in America. It is expected that the new building will be sixteen stories high and will cost about $3,000,000.

CAMDEN, N. J.—United States Senator William J. Sewell died at his home here this morning after an illness of two years. He was born at Castlebar, Ireland, on Dec. 6, 1835.

UNEMPLOYMENT DRAMATIZED.

Chicago, Dec. 22.—Burns Mantle, in a review of the Theater Guild play "1931," in THE SUNDAY TRIBUNE of Dec. 20, says,

"'1931' parades the unemployment problem and the failure of organized charity and the emergency relief to meet it. It is vivid and devastating. It is either pitifully true, or it is deliberately untrue. If untrue it calls for a corrective blast from the social agencies whose impotence it exposes. If true, we are, all of us, being cheated of our contributions to those agencies."

I have not seen the play, but judging from the reviews which I have read I should say that the situation presented is not overdrawn. It is simply dramatized. Similar situations are being experienced here in Chicago by thousands of unemployed persons. The Illinois department of labor estimates that 624,000 normally employed men and women in Chicago are out of work. This means, conservatively, a daily wage loss of more than $2,000,000. An arithmetical computation will indicate to what extent charitable relief can meet this wage loss. The Joint Emergency Relief fund of $10,000,000 would be exhausted in a week if it attempted to meet the loss in full.

Charitable relief, whether from public or private sources, cannot successfully cope with a calamity such as is brought on by widespread unemployment. What charity can do—and that is what is now being attempted in Chicago—is to see that no one physically suffers for the lack of the minimum necessities of life—namely, food, shelter, fuel, and clothing. The efforts of the public and private relief organizations must be supplemented by individual assistance to those whom one intimately knows and for whom he feels some personal obligation. At best, there will be a great deal of physical and mental distress.

Social insurance must be looked to in our future planning, since philanthropy cannot possibly meet nation-wide emergencies. Social insurance which would anticipate and prepare for times of individual or community maladjustment or distress would do much to ameliorate the suffering due to unemployment. Our one experiment in social insurance—namely, workingmen's compensation, has been such a success that we should not hesitate to go further in the insurance field. JOSEPH L. MOSS.

Director, Cook County Bureau of Public Welfare.

THE DEBTS.

Chicago, Dec. 17.—Hoover is criticized rather freely in regard to foreign debts. Would it be wise to find out what the foreign debts are? Were they not loans made to buy wheat at $2.50 a bushel and other foodstuffs just as high? Soft coal on the docks in Italy cost $25 a ton. In consequence farm lands went as high as $500 an acre and stocks in coal companies paid attractive dividends; the writer had some and profited by same. Looking at the debts that way, should we not be somewhat generous? Suppose Germany repudiates her debts, will we declare war? A. S.

DOES CHARITY FAIL!

Chicago, Dec. 21.—Under the headlines, "Play Indicts Charity Relief as Rank Failure," the SUNDAY TRIBUNE of Dec. 20 has an article reviewing the play called "1931."

Having neither seen nor read the play, one cannot from this distance judge of the correctness of its charges and inferences. I imagine there is a great deal of truth in them. Even so, it does not at all necessarily follow, as the reviewer asserts, that contributors to the agencies are being cheated.

Even the charities cannot achieve the impossible. They cannot, for instance, with a fund of $10,000,000, wholly restore normal economic conditions of living requiring a normal expenditure of more than a billion dollars. They cannot give a 100 per cent result with a fund of less than 1 per cent.

Notwithstanding the splendid generosity of thousands of contributors in New York, Chicago, and other cities, the fact remains that in the present emergency the funds subscribed are wholly inadequate. The magnificent campaign in Chicago, in which $10,000,000 has been subscribed, is a tribute to the good will and civic spirit of the people of this community. But this fund is now being distributed at the rate of $2,000,000 a month. By the end of December more than half of it will be gone. Ten million dollars is a vast sum, but the agencies engaged in its distribution are almost the sole support right now for more than 100,000 families in Cook county, besides many single individuals. That means that each family is receiving an average of less than $20 a month. Is that a vast sum?

New families are coming daily. In the month of November there were more than 20,000 new applicants. Before the end of March the whole ten million will be gone. Then what? To whom will our two hundred and fifty thousand unemployed families then turn? Let those who refuse to contribute, if there be any such, on the grounds that charity relief is a failure, let them answer. Let the members of the state legislature, if they refuse aid in this extremity, let them answer.

The charities are not to blame for economic conditions. When distress rises to abnormal proportions the best they can do is to use their relatively meager funds to hold back the tide until other larger forces come into play. Charity, I believe, is the only thing that doesn't fail. FRANK D. LOOMIS,
Secretary, Joint Emergency Relief Fund.

DE-NATURALIZATION.

Chicago, Dec. 23.—The secretary of labor has approved a bill which if passed will give the department the autocratic right to cancel citizenship of any foreign-born after five years of naturalization without even going to court, and for no crime whatsoever except working class activities.

Are we, the people of this country, who fought for its liberty, going to stand for such abuse? THEODORE KARDASH.

BUREAUCRACY IS DUG IN DEEP AND HOLDS ON TIGHT

Only Public Revolt Can Uproot It.

of a few railroad managers. The course of that experiment is typical of all governmental activities. It started on a small scale. But we have added crust upon crust to the original purpose of the interstate commerce commission until railroad management today is circumscribed by a wall of prohibitions.

"It cannot fix the price of the only thing the railroads have to sell, which is transportation. It cannot issue stocks or bonds without approval of the government. The government tells the railroad what safety appliances it must install. It fixes the hours of service of employés.

Railroad management cannot build a new line without permision. It cannot extend an old line without permission. It cannot abandon a line without permission, even if it shows, as in one case, that the passenger traffic does not pay the engineer's salary. It cannot acquire other railroads without permission. Nor can railroads determine the rate of wages to be paid their employés.

Can't Keep Their Profits.

"At the same time the government may order railroads to add to their equipment, or extend their lines. The government fixes the value and the enormous expense of the valuation has been not only a tax upon the railroads but upon the taxpayers. The railroads must keep their accounts as the commission prescribes. The railroads cannot keep their profits in good years if they exceed 6 per cent. And they are not, as is stated over and over again by politicians, guaranteed any income whatsoever. They are allowed to earn so much—which is quite a different thing.

"As a matter of fact, railroad management rests in a government bureau; different from private management because, while it has the power, it does not share the responsibility."

The expense of this kind of secondary government management is not reflected alone in public pay rolls, Mr. Thorpe pointed out. While the interstate commerce commission employs 2,000 persons, the practitioners registered at the commission in 1930 numbered 4,351. These are paid by the railroads and the public and probably the expense is many times greater than the actual expense of the commission.

Government by Suggestion.

"The third obstacle which curtails the freedom of the business man in the United States—a country which enjoys the position of the greatest economic commonwealth—is supervision," Mr. Thorpe continued. "It is a milder form of regulation but nonetheless deadly and deterrent. Supervision suggests, and the suggestion takes on more and more of governmental order. It reached its fine bloom recently when field men of the government were threatening retailers who would not fill out questionnaires on chain stores.

"Closely akin to supervision is 'servicing.' By oral and ocular advice citizens are told what crops to raise, how to raise them and how, with the helping hand of government, to market them. The federal government in Washington will tell you how to build a hen house and how to train grocery clerks, how to hang curtains in the home, how to pack a schoolboy's lunch, how to predict the price of hogs by logarithms, how to prescribe castor oil for the baby.

"The government deluges the country with more than 70 million copies of pamphlets a year, many of them containing self-helps which recall Macaulay's outburst: 'Nothing is so galling to a people, not broken in from birth, as a paternal or, in other words, a meddlesome government, a government which tells them what to read and say and eat and drink and wear.

"It may be that we have embarked so far on this road to paternalism that there can be no turning back. The plight of Australia, now bankrupt because of paternalistic schemes, the recent cataclysm in England and in Germany both brought about by the same insidious growth, seem to offer no restraint to those who would plunge government into more and more social schemes involving our economic welfare."

DEAN AT COLUMBIA SAYS MODERN LIFE IS HARD ON NERVES

New York, Dec. 27.—[Special.]—Dr. Willard C. Rappleye, dean of the school of medicine of Columbia university, in his annual report, points out that conditions of modern living are leading to an appreciable increase in nervous and mental disorders, "particularly in the functional disorders, many of which produce serious impairment and often are mistaken for organic diseases."

DR. W. C. RAPPLEYE.

"Our meager understanding of the underlying mechanism of many of the mental, emotional and functional disorders," Dean Rappleye declares, "is comparable to that which existed in regard to general medicine fifty years ago, before the introduction of accurate, measurable criteria of study which transformed medicine and surgery from mysticism, empiricism and guesswork to what in many instances now approaches scientific certainty.

"No field of medicine has received so much publicity and propaganda on as uncertain and insecure a basis as the nervous and mental disorders. This is unfortunate, for the problem is one of the most important to health, educational and public problems of our time, and there is urgent need of at least a few fundamental studies in the field."

Dean Rappleye adds that an investigation into the character of these disorders is contemplated at the medical center, although sufficient funds have not as yet been provided.

Gang Robs Three Couples on Way Home from Party

Three young couples were robbed by five bandits early yesterday when they stopped at the residence of a friend on their way home from a party at the Covenant club. They lost $118 and two watches. The robbery took place in front of the apartment house at 4746 Woodlawn avenue, where the party had stopped to visit Max Lamport. The victims were Benjamin Rosan, 3916 Congress street; Edward Hoffman, 4816 North Talman avenue; Max Elrod, 1111 Independence boulevard; Miss Sylvia Lustbader, 869 North Sacramento avenue; Miss Edith Goffen, 234 North Pine street, and Miss Lillian Schiff, 7929 Essex avenue.

GENERAL STRIKE IN HARLAN AREA SET FOR JAN. 1

Officers Continue Inquiry on Fatal Shooting.

Harlan, Ky., Dec. 27.—(AP)—Final plans for a general strike in Harlan and Bell counties, starting Jan. 1, were made at a national miners' union mass-meeting at Wallins Creek today, while officers continued their investigation of the fourth fatal shooting and the eighth violent death this year resulting from mine labor disorders.

Deputy Sheriff Virgil Sizemore, 50, was fatally wounded late Christmas night. He was a brother-in-law of State Senator Hiram W. Brock, and Commonwealth's Attorney W. A. Brock. Virgil Hutton and Mike Hall, miners, were charged with his murder, and Leonard Farmer, Hutton's father-in-law, was charged with aiding and abetting.

Says He Drew Pistol.

Deputy Sheriff James Dixon, who was with Sizemore when he was slain, said they stopped Hutton and Hall and asked to see strike literature they were distributing near Chevrolet. Instead of taking the pamphlets from his pocket, Dixon said, Hutton drew a pistol. In the ensuing scuffle Sizemore was fatally wounded.

Hutton said he did not fire until after he was struck on the head with a pistol butt and dazed, and said he did not know at whom he was firing. Hall supported Hutton's plea of self-defense. Farmer was arrested as an accomplice on the accusation he lent Hutton his pistol before the shooting.

Deputy First Victim.

A deputy sheriff was the victim of the first labor killing in Harlan county, which occurred last April. Two deputies, a mine commissary clerk and a miner died in a gun battle at Evarts a month later. In August two miners were slain by a deputy sheriff.

William Burnett, miner, was acquitted on a plea of self defense when tried for the first slaying. W. B. Jones, secretary of the Evarts local of the United Mine Workers of America, was sentenced to life imprisonment upon conviction of complicity in the quadruple killing.

William Hightower, president of the Evarts union, goes on trial at Mount Sterling tomorrow in connection with the battle at Evarts

BLAZE DESTROYS MILLION DOLLAR RAILROAD SHOPS

Altoona, Pa., Dec. 27.—(AP)—Fire today destroyed the $1,000,000 12th street shops of the Pennsylvania Railroad company.

Late today the main units of the shop had been leveled and the fire, although under control, was still burning in some of the lesser units.

The blaze was discovered about 8 o'clock this morning and before fire apparatus could be summoned it had made such headway that it was impossible to save the main shops.

Firemen and railroad officials said damage to shops and equipment would be between $1,500,000 and $2,000,000. Approximately 1,100 men were employed in the shops.

The blaze started in the bolt shop, on the second floor of one of the buildings. The floor there was oil-soaked and the flames spread rapidly. They had gained considerable headway before the first alarm was turned in.

No men were in the shops, as the works had been closed for the holidays.

Although firemen were endangered by falling walls and floors and the crash of heavy machinery, no one was injured.

U. S. WILL HOLD RUM CASE OVER HEAD OF CAPONE

Al Capone, who was indicted with 68 of his men several months ago on charges of conspiracy to violate the prohibition law, will not be tried with the others next month, District Attorney George E. Q. Johnson indicated yesterday.

If Capone loses his appeal from the eleven year sentence imposed on him recently by Federal Judge James H. Wilkerson for income tax shirking, as the district attorney expects, this strategy in the prohibition case will block any possibility of his being paroled after he has served one-third of his tax sentence, it was explained.

"He is not eligible for parole as long as that liquor indictment stands in the records against him, and we're inclined to let it stand, at least for the present," said Mr. Johnson.

"As for his co-defendants in the case, we're going to prosecute them as soon as possible. In my opinion all the chief figures in Capone's organization are represented in the list of 68 named with him in the indictment."

LONDON INVITES PARIS TO PRIVATE PARLEY ON DEBTS

Strive to Link Policies on Reparations.

BY EDMOND TAYLOR.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, Dec. 27.—Premier Laval of France today received an invitation from Prime Minister MacDonald of Great Britain to a personal conference in an attempt to coördinate the policies of the two countries on reparations before the international reparations conference at The Hague Jan. 18, it was semi-officially announced tonight. Special emphasis will be placed on the definition of what stand to take regarding the United States.

The private discussions of the two statesmen will follow the conferences between Sir Frederick Leith-Ross, British treasury expert, and Pierre-Etienne Flandin, French minister of finance, of the past week. These talks are reported to have reached a standstill.

How Nations Differ.

Sir Frederick, it is said, maintains that Germany ought to be granted a five year moratorium and that France should abandon all reparations claims, both conditional and unconditional, in return for cancellation of war debts by the United States. Flandin, on the other hand, insists that the moratorium must not exceed two years as provided under the Young plan and must apply to the conditional two-thirds of the reparations payments only.

The unconditional one-third, of which France receives 80 per cent, should be collected from Germany and turned back to the German railways as a commercial loan as under the Hoover moratorium, according to the French finance chief.

Laval, it is believed, will do his utmost to persuade Mr. MacDonald of the need of solidarity in demanding war debt concessions from America, as France considers the provisions of the moratorium contained in her war debt accord with the United States will be inadequate when the German reparations payments cease.

French Attack U. S.

In the meantime a desperate hope that the conversations between Premier Laval and Prime Minister MacDonald may develop into a European-wide conference and result in a common cause against "America's stiff-neck incomprehension regarding war debt cancellation" was expressed by the French press tonight.

A flood of editorials was loosed largely as a result of reaffirmation in dispatches from Washington that the American government's attitude is to ignore the reparations conference, or at the most, to send an observer.

The fact that the American congress will not countenance cancellation of the 40 per cent that remains of the French war debt to the United States is angering the French press, which now stands convinced by the report of the Young plan advisory committee that it is impossible to extract anything from Germany within the next two years at least.

The newspapers tonight expressed the hope that Italy would be included in the Anglo-French conference in order that she too may become lined up against the United States. They drew the conclusion "that it is to the interest of all European nations to unite against the unreasonableness of America."

Even Germany, the press said, should join France, arguing that it would be to Berlin's advantage, inasmuch as Germany cannot hope to get any appreciable remission of reparations payments from France unless America remits the French debts.

"FLIP UP" SEAT ISSUE IS AGAIN BEFORE COUNCIL

A change in the building code to require theaters to equip all seats with a device that would cause them to rise automatically when unoccupied is being sought by Ald. James F. Kovarik [15th] from the city council committee on buildings and zoning.

ALD. J. F. KOVARIK.

An amendment embodying the change was introduced by Ald. Kovarik at a recent meeting of the council. It was referred to the buildings committee, and Ald. Dorsey R. Crowe [43d], chairman, has announced that public hearings will be held before any action is taken on the proposed measure.

"Not every one bothers to raise a seat when leaving a theater," said Ald. Kovarik in explanation of his proposal, "and persons sometimes stumble against the lowered and unoccupied seats. If it were necessary to empty a theater in a hurry the lowered seats might cause trouble that a mechanical lifting device would eliminate."

A similar change in the code was passed by the council 18 months ago but was withdrawn by its sponsor, former Ald. William R. O'Toole, before it became effective.

LEADER RAINEY SAYS HOUSE TO SLASH BUDGET

Democrats in Accord, He Declares.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Dec. 27.—[Special.]—The house committee on appropriations has undertaken to reduce the expenses of the government for the fiscal year 1933 below the amounts asked for by President Hoover in his budget message, Representative Henry T. Rainey, majority leader of the house, said today.

HENRY T. RAINEY.

"It is impossible to say at the present time what reductions will be made in the budget estimate," said Mr. Rainey, "but it is safe to predict that every bill reported out from the appropriations committee will carry less than the estimates. A meeting of the Democratic chairmen of every subcommittee of the appropriations committee has been held and they have all agreed on this proposition.

To Attack Administration.

"It is to be regretted that the taxpayers of the country are to be subject now to a new and staggering burdens of taxation. Before these bills are passed there will be ameliorating modifications which Democratic committees will insert. It is proposed hereafter to call the attention of the country in no uncertain way to the policies of the administrations which have succeeded the Democratic administration of President Wilson and which have made necessary these new and enormous burdens.

"It will be the policy of the Democratic majority of the ways and means committee to adopt those methods of taxation which will be least burdensome and which will compel entrenched wealth to pay the share it ought to pay."

Points to Moratorium Rider.

Mr. Rainey pointed with pride to the rider on the moratorium bill which put the quietus on the President's move for a reopening of the war debt settlements by declaring any reduction of the obligations.

"The real debt postponement fight," he added, "will come up in June of next year when an attempt is made by our debtor nations to get a further postponement of the amounts due next year."

The majority leader said he and other Democrats will withhold the making of political speeches until after the passage of the President's program of reconstruction legislation whereupon they purpose to cut loose and rake Republican administrations since the Wilson régime.

Open Tropical Show

Thousands of visitors passed through the Garfield park conservatory yesterday on the opening day of the park's annual tropical flower show. In another aisle of the conservatory they saw, in the Christmas flower show opened Christmas day, specimens of white poinsettia developed under the supervision of August Koch, chief horticulturist of the west parks system.

EACH CLERGYMAN TAXED $120 IN MEXICAN STATE

MEXICO CITY, Dec. 27.—(AP)—A Cuernavaca dispatch to La Prensa said tonight the state legislature of Morelos had enacted a law imposing a tax of 300 pesos [about $120] yearly on each clergyman, regardless of his religion.

El Nacional, organ of the government party here, said today the measure to limit priests in Mexico City to one for every 50,000 inhabitants would be published and become a law Monday.

The proposed law, which would have the effect of limiting the priests in Mexico City to 24, would become effective immediately after its publication, the newspaper said.

New York, Dec. 27.—(AP)—The New York Rangers, leaders of the National Hockey league's American division, turned back the Chicago Blackhawks, 3 to 1, tonight in a well played, but slow game. The victory put the Rangers 11 points ahead of the Hawks and the Boston Bruins, who are tied for second place.

Both teams were inclined to play cautious hockey during the early part of the game, dropping back quickly after their attacks were broken up and, apparently, waiting for a break. But they opened up with a burst of speed at the finish after the Rangers had finally taken the lead.

Hawks Score First.

Tommy Cook, who was a constant source of trouble to the Rangers all evening, gave the Hawks the first goal at 1:19 of the second period, eluding the Ranger defense with a fine exhibition of stick handling. But the Rangers evened the count before the period ended, Cecil Dillon poking in the puck on a four man passing attack just after the end of a series of penalties that left Chicago shorthanded for six minutes on end.

The winning goal came half way through the third period when Chuck Gardner, brilliant Chicago goalie, stumbled coming out of the net and missed an easy stop. Bill Cook made the score on Brother Bun's pass. Then, just to complete the triumph, Dillon broke away toward the end of the period when Chicago had five forwards on the ice, and netted the final goal on a fast solo trip down the rink.

Lights Go Out.

Abel started things off in a passing attack with March that brought a wild flurry around the net. There was a quick change of lines then, the teams settled down into a tight checking game.

An accident to the lights brought a halt as the main battery went out, leaving the arena too dim for play.

Chicago's standbys, Ripley, Gottselig and Couture, put on a drive that Eddie Roach stop a couple of tough ones and play opened up a bit more when Somers and Gottselig drew roughing penalties.

The start of the second period was dull, but while they were playing for a break, Tommy Cook made one to give Chicago a lead in 2:10. He left the Ranger forwards behind, eluded Bob Seibert and Johnson with some neat stick handling, then trickled a shot past Roach from close to the corner of the net. The puck hit the goalie's arm and bounced just inside the cage on the far side.

Rangers Tie Score.

A tripping penalty to Gottselig followed immediately and Gardner did some remarkable work as the blue shirts swarmed around his net. They finally got him out of position just as Gottselig returned and tied the score.

Dillon made the goal from a scramble in front of the net, taking three shots at the puck before he finally got it in. Murdoch, Somers and Brennan were given assists. The Hawks protested violently, but unsuccessfully.

Gardner had to fall on the puck to stop the first Ranger raid of the third period but the play again lagged until Dillon was sent off for charging Johnson. The Hawks sent down four times but were slow getting their attack organized the New Yorkers escaped with only a few close calls.

Rangers Take Lead.

Half way through the period there was a considerable increase in speed. And as it began to slow down, the Cook brothers got together for a freak play that put the Rangers ahead. Bun sent a long pass out from the middle and Bill slapped a shot at the net. Gardner came out to meet it, stumbled and missed a wild grab for the puck, which slid through his outstretched legs into the net.

The five Chicago forwards trying to break the count, Dillon broke away alone, stood down and feinted Gardner out for a neat solo goal. Brennan drew a penalty a moment later, after a near battle with several Chicago players, but while he was off, Dillon and Murdoch put on a charge that had the puck near the Chicago goal in the last

SCHMELING WILL BOX WALKER IN MIAMI ON FEB. 26

Jacobs to Sign with Garden Tuesday.

New York, Dec. 27.—[Special.]—Joe Jacobs, manager of Max Schmeling, Tuesday will sign the champion for a title defense against Mickey Walker in a 15 round bout at Miami Feb. 26. Announcement to this effect was made today by Jacobs following a series of conferences with William F. Carey, president of the Madison Square Garden corporation.

The contest, according to present plans, will be held under Garden direction and will be one of two title battles for which Schmeling will be signed under Garden auspices. The other will be in June, and will be against either Jack Dempsey or Jack Sharkey.

Jacobs to Post Check.

In behalf of Schmeling, Jacobs said, a check will be forwarded to the National Boxing association within forty-eight hours as a guarantee Schmeling will agree on or before Jan. 5 to defend his title against a suitable challenger. This check, Jacobs said, will be in the amount of $2,500, as required in the order of Gen. John V. Clinnin, National Boxing association president. The check will be accompanied by a document in which Jacobs, for Schmeling, will set forth that the champion is to defend his title against Walker.

Gen. Clinnin has announced intention of having the N. B. A. cancel its recognition of Schmeling as champion, unless the German is committed to a defense of his title on or before Jan. 5. Jacobs regards it as highly improbable that the N. B. A. will reject Walker as challenger, in view of the fact that Walker had the association's support as a suitable title bout participant during the recent negotiations to land the Schmeling-Walker match for Chicago.

Schmeling Sails Tuesday.

Schmeling, Jacobs announced, will sail from Germany for this country Tuesday, and is scheduled to arrive here Jan. 4. The champion plans a series of five exhibition appearances, commencing Jan. 7 at Paterson, N. J., with subsequent dates at Boston, North Adams, Mass.; Newark, N. J., and Washington, D. C. From the capital, Jacobs said, Schmeling will proceed south, according to the present itinerary, to launch a training campaign for the proposed Walker match.

Jacobs today was in communication with a promoter whose identity he declined to divulge, from whom the champion's manager said he had an offer of a guaranteed $500,000 for Schmeling to box Dempsey next summer.

Jacobs Has Offer?

A similar sum is to be guaranteed Dempsey, Jacobs said his caller informed him, adding that the mysterious individual, who said he was acting for an out of town syndicate, expressed a willingness to post a $100,000 forfeit as an evidence of good faith, just as soon as Schmeling was committed to a contract.

SECOND ANNUAL TRIBUNE SKI MEET
Riis Park, Jan. 3

AGE .....

There will be four divisions: 12 years of age and under; 13 and 14; 15 and 16, and boys 17 and over. Mail entry to Ski Editor, Sports Department, Chicago Tribune. Entries close at midnight, Dec. 30. Neither THE TRIBUNE nor the Northwest Park district is responsible in case of injury to contestants.

Munn Elated Over Winning Grid Trophy

Minneapolis, Minn., Dec. 27.—[Special.]—Winner of more athletic honors than any boy in the history of the University of Minnesota, Clarence Munn, Gopher guard, was elated beyond expression today as he received congratulations following his selection as winner of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE'S most valuable player award for the 1931 Western conference season.

When a TRIBUNE representative visited him today in his cozy little apartment, Munn, at first, was speechless. He was happier than on the numerous occasions on which he had been chosen for honorary teams, but when it came to putting his expression into words, he was stopped.

—o—

But Mrs. Clarence Munn came to his rescue. She suggested that her husband retire into another room and write his own statement. He accepted the suggestion and in a few minutes he was back with this statement:

"What impressed me the most about my selection was the fact that I was chosen by such a prominent group of men. I think that every boy who is picked by his mates for this award should be proud of the honor. The men who chose the winner of this trophy have such prominent positions and are so highly respected that to be considered by them couldn't help but make one proud.

"According to what I have heard about THE TRIBUNE'S trophy, it is a beautiful thing. It is going to be great to be owner of it. Of course, I know that no man can win this alone. His coach, his team, the newspapers and the public in general help him to achieve this ambition. I want to thank THE TRIBUNE for giving us boys something so wonderful to hope and fight for. It's worth all the effort."

—o—

Munn was especially pleased because he is the first Minnesota athlete ever to be chosen for THE TRIBUNE award.

Minnesota's outstanding star is not through with athletics by any means. He now is in training for the last year of his track career. He is hopeful that his performances in the shotput next spring and summer will earn him a place on the American Olympic team at Los Angeles. Besieged with offers to turn professional, Munn has turned a deaf ear to all of them for the present. He intends to follow a coaching career as his days of amateur competition are at an end.

22 Norge Boys Enter Tribune Ski Tourney

Twenty-two boys of the Norge Ski club will compete in the second annual ski tournament of THE TRIBUNE which is scheduled next Sunday afternoon at Riis Park, Fullerton and Mead avenues. With the exception of the lowest age classification, that for boys 12 years of age and under, the entry is fairly well distributed.

The Norge club, on the basis of previous showings of its entrants, is favored to win the team trophy. This trophy will be awarded to the club or organization which scores the most points in the four classes. First place will count five points; second place three points, and third place one point.

Medals for All Classes.

Three medals are the individual prizes in each class while a gold medal will be given to the boy who makes the longest jump regardless of form. Form and distance determine the other awards.

Entries close Wednesday at midnight. All letters postmarked of that date will be accepted. Post entries are not permitted.

The absence of winter weather, of course, handicaps all boys who expect to compete. But it is a double handicap to novices, many of whom have engaged in the sport only a few times.

Mail Entries Now.

The meet will not be postponed unless it is absolutely impossible to conduct the competition.

It is advisable for all boys who wish to try their courage and skill on the 60 foot slide to send in their entries immediately. Mail them to the Ski Editor, Sports department, CHICAGO TRIBUNE.

32 PREP FIVES START HOLIDAY TOURNEY TODAY

Crane-Watseka Game to Open Fieldhouse.

Sixteen prep basketball teams from the public schools of Chicago and northern Illinois will go into action today at the new University of Chicago fieldhouse in the opening round of Coach A. A. Stagg's holiday week tournament. Sixteen more squads will take the floor tomorrow, and from Wednesday until Saturday night at 9 o'clock the survivors of each day's play will battle it out for the tourney championship.

When Coach Stagg tosses a new ball into the arena at 56th street and University avenue today at 1 p. m. the gesture will signalize more than one beginning. First, it will send Crane Tech, Chicago public school champion three out of four years, against a squad from Watseka in the first game of the meet.

A Triumph for Stagg.

This in itself will mark a personal triumph for Coach Stagg. Two years ago the Midway leader, after staging his eleventh national championship tournament in Bartlett gymnasium, abandoned the big meet at the request of the state high school associations. Undaunted, he organized a modest local tournament last Christmas.

The idea was a success, and this year 17 of the 32 entrants were selected from leading teams outside the city league.

Opens New Fieldhouse.

Of importance to Coach Stagg is the fact that the match between Crane and Watseka opens the huge structure which he has been planning for ten years, and which he hopes will be the center for indoor athletics for another fifty years. The fieldhouse floor, on which the paint of the feul lines will be barely dry today, will be the scene of thirty-four basketball games this week, thirty-two of them in the prep tournament and two Maroon varsity games.

Coach Lifschultz' Crane Tech team is favored to win the first game in the fieldhouse. Lanky Bob Gruenig, 6 feet 8 inch center, an accurate shooter, leads his team's attack. The strong New Trier squad will take the floor at 2 o'clock against a fast team from Tuley High in the second of the hourly matches.

Dundee Battles Calumet.

Dundee High, which last week conquered the strong Harrison team, winner of the Pontiac tournament last year, will face Coach Boyle's rejuvenated Calumet team at 3. Tilden Tech tackles Swaney Township High of McNabb at 4 and the feature game of the day, between Lindblom, defending champion of the meet, and Riverside, west suburban champs for five years, is slated as the last of the afternoon, at 5.

After a recess of one hour, three games will be run off in the evening, the feature being the battle at 8 o'clock between Morton, which defeated the powerful Bowen team Friday, and Evanston.

Standouts in tomorrow's bracket are Bowen, which is led by the brilliant Haarlow, and which placed second in the meet last year, even with Haarlow on the sick list; Lake View, Marshall, and Elgin. Schedule:

TODAY.
1 p. m.—Crane vs. Watseka.
2 p. m.—Tuley vs. New Trier.
3 p. m.—Calumet vs. Dundee.
4 p. m.—Tilden vs. Swaney township.
5 p. m.—Lindblom vs. Riverside.
7 p. m.—Thornton vs. Austin.
8 p. m.—Morton vs. Evanston.
9 p. m.—Proviso vs. Lane.

TOMORROW.
1 p. m.—Lake View vs. Bloom.
2 p. m.—Blue Island vs. York.
3 p. m.—Marshall vs. Elgin.
4 p. m.—Hinsdale vs. Englewood.
5 p. m.—Hyde Park vs. Antioch.
7 p. m.—Senn vs. Morgan Park.
8 p. m.—St. Charles vs. Parker.
9 p. m.—Bowen vs. Normal, Ill.

Casa Del Mar, Glen Eagles Golf Clubs Unite

Announcement was made yesterday that the Casa del Mar and Glen Eagles golf clubs have combined and play next season will be held on the Casa del Mar links at Dyer, Ind. Officials of the Glen Eagles club decided to affiliate with Casa del Mar when plans to purchase the property from the holding club failed to materialize.

PREPARING TO DO THEIR BIT FOR CHARITY

Name Officials for Relief Fund Tennis Show

Ralph G. Modica, chairman of the Tennis Umpires association, will be chairman of the officials for the all-star amateur tennis matches at the Chicago Stadium tomorrow night. He also will umpire the second match. The first match will be umpired by Paul Bennett, tennis coach at Northwestern university.

Lyman Hayes, who has umpired matches in the east and at Wimbledon, will officiate at the doubles match. These assignments were approved yesterday by the tennis committee of the Joint Emergency Relief fund, which will receive proceeds of the matches.

Ten Linesmen for Match.

Linesmen will include Walter Hayes, Ralph Westcott, Jerry Weber, George Bristol, Richard Gordon, Gair Tourtellot, Lester J. Nash, Wesley Allen, Lindsay Beaton, Ted Halsted, Frank Linroth, William Campbell, and Leo J. Lunn. There will be ten linesmen for each match.

Spectators will see the four players who probably will make up the United States Davis cup team next year—Ellsworth Vines of Pasadena, Cal., United States singles champion; George Lott of Chicago, runner-up to Vines last season; Francis X. Shields of New York, and John Van Ryn of Philadelphia. Lott and Van Ryn won the world's doubles championship at Wimbledon last season and also hold the French hard court championship.

Easterners Due Tomorrow.

Vines arrived Saturday and he and Lott are practicing daily for the matches. Van Ryn and Shields will arrive tomorrow morning. They have been playing in the east.

The matches will start at 8:30 o'clock, and if the play is as close as is expected each match should last about one hour. All matches will be the best two out of three sets.

Hockey Results

BY EDWARD BURNS.

The Chicago Shamrocks last night finally got around to administering a licking to the lowly St. Louis Fliers, a matter that had been delayed for the last week, during which the Fliers whipped the Chicago's, 4 to 3, on last Tuesday night and held them to a 1 to 1 tie the night before last. The score of this belated Shamrock victory was 4 to 0, and three of the goals came in the final session.

The win restored the first place tie betwen the Shamrocks and Kansas City which had been broken by a Pla-Mor victory over Duluth Saturday night.

Scorers in Rare Form.

The first score was a mêlée result that was followed by the usual confusion in the league's scoring box, which rarely calls a scoring play correctly on the first guess, especially if it involves more than one player. Several versions were announced by the official scorers, but those who saw the play seemed agreed that Buswell made the score.

They still are debating as to whether O'Neill or McFadyen should have been given credit for the assist. Every one, however, disagreed with the scorers in their announcement that McFadyen scored the goal.

The second goal was a cinch for even the scorers to follow. Ade Johnson took care of the entire matter all by himself. Tony Prelesnik and Taylor rang up the other counters. More than 7,000 saw the conflict.

Dye Tells Referee.

There was a degree of excitement during the scoreless first period, though neither team caused any one to get grayheaded from worrying about a score being made.

The period was enlivened somewhat when Babe Dye, spirited manager of the Shamrocks, emitted a loud yelp when Referee McKinnon, center of a brawl here eight nights ago, sent Riley to the penalty box. Dye sent out his captain, Brydson, to bring McKinnon to the bench to listen to Dye's cuss tidbits. McKinnon responded to the call, accompanied by the well upholstered Flier goalie, Herb Rheaume, who had to skate three-quarters of the way down the ice to perform his escort duty. Herbie swished his big bat under Babe's nose, greatly chilling some of the Shamrock manager's best words and phrases.

Shamrocks Score.

The second period was much more rapid than the first especially during an interval in the first five minutes when Williams and Creasy were placed in the penalty box while the Shamrocks were enjoying their full strength. Burns, Brydson, Johnson, Buswell, and Headley put on a concerted drive to push through a score, but although they made Rheaume do a highland fling almost constantly for the two minutes of the Fliers' shorthandedness, the St. Louis cage man was able to stand off the onslaught, somewhat through skill and somewhat through the good offices of Allah.

After the Fliers had regained their full strength, the Shamrocks did much better. McFadyen sent a spinner at Rheaume's toe and before the Flier goalie could take a second kick at it Buswell raced up and batted in the marker.

Score Three More.

Johnson negotiated Shamrock marker No. 2 in a nice solo performance early in the second minute of the final period. He followed up his own long shot, and when Rheaume sprawled to block Ade's close up effort, the young man neatly lofted the rubber right over Mr. Rheaume's person, smackdab into the middle of the net.

Goal No. 3 was a clockwork affair in which Prelesnik was given credit for an unassisted effort, though Wiseman did stellar work in carrying the puck down the ice. The time was 15 minutes even.

Goal No. 4 was made by Bouncer Taylor from the blue line. The shot bounced off Goalie Rheaume's chest into the net. The time was 18:42.

ST. CYR OUSTED FROM UNBEATEN RANKS OF K. OF C.

MOON MULLINS—A SIGHT FOR SORE EYES

SMITTY—THE WRONG NUMBER

NATIONAL LEAGUE BATTERS SWEAR WALKER'S A SCOT

New York, Dec. 27.—(AP)—World series fans were amused and St. Louis partisans more than slightly alarmed at the ease with which Southpaw Bill Walker of the Giants baffled the Cardinals in batting practice for the championship games last October.

Walker, hired by Manager Gabby Street to acquaint the Cards with the kind of pitching they would face in the big series, did his job a little too well. Day after day, with Judge Landis and everbody looking on, he made the Redbirds look like second raters. They couldn't knock one out of the infield.

But, after Walker had done his chores and retired to the dugout to enjoy the game, the Cards proceeded to do things to Lefty Grove and Rube Walberg, the Athletics' star left handers. The explanation, if any is needed, is supplied in the official National league pitching averages for 1931, released today.

Most Effective in League.

Walker, with six shutouts to his credit in 19 complete games and an earned run average of 2.26, was the league's most effective moundsman for the year. His closest rival was a southpaw teammate, Carl Hubbell, who gave up only 2.65 runs per game.

Other leaders in effectiveness were Ed Brandt of Boston, 2.92; Heinie Meine, Pittsburgh, 2.98; Sylvester Johnson, St. Louis, 3.00; Fred Fitzsimmons, New York, 3.05, and Tom Zachary, Boston, 3.09.

Paul Derringer, rookie right hander of the champion Cardinals, compiled the best record on the basis of games won and lost with 18 and 8 for a percentage of .692. His teammate, Bill Hallahan, whose brilliant performance featured the world series, was second with 19 won and 9 lost. Guy Bush of Chicago won 16 and lost 8 and Burleigh Grimes, another of the Cards' series heroes, won 17 and dropped 9.

Hallahan Leads in Strikeouts.

In addition to tying with Jim Elliott of the Phillies and Heinie Meine of Pittsburgh for most games won, each with 19, Hallahan was credited with three other records. He was the league's strikeout king, with 159, gave the most bases on balls, 112, and made the most wild pitches, 11.

Jim Elliott took part in the most games, 52, and allowed the most runs, 138. Charles [Red] Lucas of Cincinnati pitched the most complete games, 24, and his teammate, Silas Johnson, suffered the most defeats, 19.

Larry French and Meine, hard working wheelhorses of the Pirates' staff, accounted for three marks. Meine pitched the most innings, 284, and faced the greatest number of batters, 1,202. French allowed more hits than any other pitcher, 301.

Quinn Ties Relief Record.

The ancient John Quinn, picked up by Brooklyn after his big league career apparently had ended, was one of the individual heroes of a great year for pitchers in general. He finished 29 games for the Robins, tying the league marks established by Lloyd Davies of New York in 1926.

Among men pitching fewer than 10 complete games, Jim Mooney, New York recruit, carried off top honors. Reporting from Bridgeport late in the season, Mooney won seven games and lost one, and allowed only 2.00 earned runs per game.

DUSEK MATCH TO END LONDOS' BUSIEST YEAR

When Jim Londos meets Rudy Dusek in the Coliseum Wednesday night, he will be ending his wrestling labors for the year 1931, during which it is believed he has set a new record for number of appearances.

Wrestling on an average of three times a week, the Greek heavyweight h appeared in at least 150 matches during the last twelve months.

Londos and Dusek met three times during the year and on each occasion, Londos was extended to conquer the Nebraska boy.

BAR STACK FROM NATIONAL MEET AT OCONOMOWOC

Milwaukee, Wis., Dec. 27.—Frank Stack, former Chicago skating star and senior national champion, will not be permitted to defend his title at the national championship meet at Oconomowoc, Wis., Jan. 16 and 17.

William Kritter, president of the Wisconsin Skating association, yesterday received word Stack had been ruled ineligible by the Amateur Skating Union of the United States, which requires that a participant in a national meet shall have lived in this country six months before the meet.

Stack, a Canadian, has been training in Canada and established his residence in the United States only three months ago.

Eastern Grid Officials Put O.K. on Rules

New York, Dec. 27.—(AP)—The football rules are "pretty good" as they stand, in the opinion of the Eastern Football Officials' association.

Meeting here today in a forerunner to a week of high powered gridiron conventions, members of the eastern association declined to subscribe to the popular theory that the rules need a thorough overhauling.

"We think they are pretty good as they stand," the organization's publicity committee told reporters after the session. "We don't intend to recommend any changes. It is our business only to interpret the rules as laid down by the rules committee."

It had been anticipated that the officials would, in response to the agitation caused by more than 40 deaths on the football field this year, recommend some drastic changes in the rules. They contented themselves with appointing a committee of three members to survey the rules and report to the national rules committee at its annual meeting in February.

Those appointed to this task were Tom McCabe of Boston, Ed Thorp of New York, and W. W. Palmer of Philadelphia, all veteran officials. They will do their work without any suggestions from the association.

The meeting decided to impose more rigid tests on applicants for membership in the association. Hereafter it will be necessary for a prospective new member to have officiated in at least 15 major games in the three years preceding his application.

BRICKIES SHORT ONE PLAYER, BUT BEAT NORSEMEN

Jimmy Lillie's goal with nine minutes to play enabled the Brickliayers to defeat the Norwegian-American, 4 to 3, in the first round of the National cup soccer competition at Olympia park yesterday.

The Brickies had only ten men when Lillie scored. Coutts had been sent off the field.

The other goals were made by Munro, Greenlees and Coutts for the Brickies

Lonely Child Finds Career as Singer in Opera

And That's the Plot of "Honeyflow."

"Honeyflow," by Ben Ames Williams. [Dutton.]

THIS latest novel by Ben Ames Williams concerns the life of a famous prima donna of the Metropolitan opera. There are many biographical details that correspond to the actualities in the lives of several opera stars. The reader allured by the prospect of discovering the heroine's identity will read this book not only for its imaginative aspects, but also for its exciting promise of authenticity.

BEN AMES WILLIAMS. [From Bachrach Portrait.]

Sophie Randle, an orphan undestroyed by the people who come to the asylum to adopt children, retires into herself and feels the bitterness of loneliness at an early age. Her uncle, after the death of his wife, consents to take her into his home on his Maine farm. There she experiences freedom for the first time, and there for the first time she tries out the voice that is to capture the world. A stroke of luck brings her to Boston to train her voice.

At 16 she still is young enough to become a great singer. For several years, with a passionate singleness of purpose, she subjects herself to the most rigorous discipline. She sees at the end of that time that if she is to get ahead she must give herself to various influential men. Purely for the sake of her career she becomes the mistress of a man who takes her to Italy. There eventually she makes her debut. The years pass and she becomes a cold, sophisticated woman knowing what she wants and getting it. Her fame finally is heralded from one continent to another. At the height of her success she falls in love with a man twelve years younger than herself. The denouement of the novel deals with her emotional struggle with the one man she has ever loved and her fight to hold his love.

The theme of the story is intimated early in the book. The author presents her prototype in a singer who has lost her voice and who retires almost insane with loneliness and frustration. This singer is the one who first tells Sophie that she has genius. Though the reader can guess the conclusion to the story it does not affect his interest in the development of Sophie's character. The counterpoint of the main theme is also introduced early in the book and is expressed in this conversation: "What is that?" she asks, careful to hold her tones steady. "What is the honeyflow?" "Why, it's the season when flowers are full of sweets," he explained. "The first honeyflow's in the spring, the red maple and the locust. All the early trees. Then the orchards, and the berry bushes, and the clover in the summer, and last of all come the golden rod and the asters, in the fall. The fall honeyflow is very short, of course. It soon fails." "Indian summer," she murmured; and he nodded. "Yes," he assented. "Like Indian summer; sweet, but soon gone." The chapters are titled "Red Maple," "Sweet Locust," "Apple Blossoms," etc. And they technically carry out the thematic intention.

The author draws a very convincing and realistic picture of the personality of Sophie Randle. The pattern of her loneliness, the cruelty of her eccentricity, and her driving ambition are handled so sympathetically and yet so fairly that the reader gives his complete credence to her characterization.

The other characters in the book are treated less convincingly. The man whom she loves is not drawn clearly. Some of the time he seems entirely real and again the author seems arbitrarily to make him act out of character. The ultimate effect is one of superficiality and stiffness, as if the author were inconsistently guiding the action of his character according to the exigencies of the story. For instance, Alec's desertion of Gretchen is not sufficiently foreshadowed to be credible, and the same inadequacy of motives appears when he leaves the beautiful Sophie. The reader feels that the author is trying to realize his primary intention of portraying the emptiness of a life devoted to ambition, for which intention he sacrifices the reality of Alec's personality.

The last flaw of serious importance occurs in the introduction of the secondary character, Gretchen. She at first is needed to develop the plot; as the reader's interest is aroused, because she seems so real. Later when she is no longer necessary to the favorable progress of the story she is summarily dismissed by the author, and her fate is never again mentioned.

Despite the technical faults in this novel, and despite the occasional melodramatic and purple passages, the novel holds the rapt attention of the reader. Sophie remains a fascinating and very real woman, whether her story is authentic or only fictional.

Hobson	Col. McDonald
Mrs. Hawkins	Tessie Piggott

By Mae Tinée.

Good morning!

They say, you know, that if one shock robs you of your wits, another may jounce 'em back again. So—if "Frankenstein" scared you pink, why not dash over and take a look at "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde"? The latter is, in its way, quite as terrorizing as the former.

The talking version of Stevenson's weird story, played for the silent screen by John Barrymore, is a colorful and elaborately staged production. A convincing atmosphere of horror and suspense hangs like a pall over the action, and the director handled story material and players with a canny sense of theater. The photography is unusually fine—especially the trick shots. The metamorphosis of Jekyll into Hyde, right before your eyes, is a sight marvelous to the point of the unbelievable.

You will be surprised at the magnificent performance of Frederick March in a role so totally unlike anything he has ever played before. This good looking, romantic actor—remember him in "The Royal Family of Broadway' ?—gives a positively startling account of himself in the dual rolé. As Jekyll, he is a fine, sensitive idealistic though, perhaps, somewhat eccentric young doctor of aristocratic appearance, devoted to his profession, his music and his lovely, high born fiancée, Muriel Carew. As Hyde, he is horrible, beastly, primitive—the Neanderthal man of your nightmares.

As such, his scenes with Miriam Hopkins—Ivy Parsons—the pretty cockney music hall girl, whom he has met as Jekyll and whom, as Hyde he makes his own, are hair raising. Never was sheer, stark gibbering terror more realistically portrayed than by Miss Hopkins in these episodes. The girl was frightened, beyond a doubt, and when you see Hyde you'll quite understand how she could be even though she realized it was all, so to speak, in fun.

Rose Hobart is adorable as the girl Jekyll worships, but never attains because of Hyde. All other rôles are expertly handled.

Stevenson's story has been considerably changed in non-essentials for screen purposes, but the plot idea of the man who meddled in God's business and, to his horror saw his evil self conquer his good, is intact.

You won't soon forget "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde"—and the children never would. So send them Mickey Mouse-ing while you indulge in your fit of shivers at McVicker's.

See you tomorrow.

RADIO CARRIES PART OF PAPAL MASS AS HISTORIC BROADCAST

[Copyright: 1931: By the New York Times.]

ROME, Dec. 27.—For the first time in history a microphone was placed near the high altar of St. Peter's this morning when the pope officiated at high mass. The benediction and Te Deum Laudamus was broadcast to America and other countries. The pontiff would not allow the whole mass to be transmitted.

The occasion of the pope's descent into St. Peter's was a mass celebrating the close of the fifteenth century of the council at Ephesus. They also called forth his encyclical issued yesterday.

The huge basilica was packed with worshipers, including foreigners visiting Rome. A large number of cardinals, bishops, and archbishops were present as ceremony foreign members of the sacred college. They included Cardinal Bourne of Westminster, Cardinal Segura, archbishop of Madrid, who is staying in Rome indefinitely as a result of recent events in Spain, and Cardinal Fruhwirth of Germany. Also Cardinal Gasparri, formerly papal secretary of state and well known in Washington when he was apostolic delegate there.

The wedding will take place in the late spring.

Rabbi Tells About Zionist Progress in Palestine Colonies

Speaking last evening at the annual conference of the Zionist organization of Chicago in the Hotel Sherman, Rabbi Solomon Goldman asserted that the Jews have no desire to impose their culture on the present inhabitants of Palestine, but desire to coöperate with them in establishing "occidental civilization."

"Jewish efforts to rebuild Palestine are being supported by governments all over the world," he said. "We wish to make a great experiment in brotherhood there."

Officers for the coming year were elected at the conference. They are Jacob M. Braude, president; Moses B. Levitan, vice president; Abe Simon, treasurer, and Joel David Wolfsohn, secretary. Judge Harry M. Fisher is the retiring president.

American Students Are Better Now, So Lowell Asserts

Cambridge, Mass., Dec. 27.—[Special.]—The American college student of today is superior to his predecessor of a generation ago. So says President A. Lawrence Lowell in his annual report to the Harvard board of overseers for the academic year 1930-'31.

President Lowell says that instruction in the best American colleges "corresponds with, and in some subjects at least, is quite equal to, that of Oxford and Cambridge."

"Our college students as a whole appear more mature than a generation ago, not only in scholarship, but also in their outside interests and in the sense of proportionate values which is the flower of maturity," President Lowell says. "And this in spite of—perhaps to some extent because of—the fact that they enter a year younger than they did in the early nineties.

"Maturity is by no means wholly a matter of years. It depends much more on environment, and above all on responsibility."

According to the report, gifts and legacies received during the year by Harvard university amounted to $15,261,420.89. This was apart from the payments of previous subscriptions to the alumni endowment fund, of income paid as capital by the trustees under the will of Gordon McKay, and of sums received for pensions from the Carnegie Foundation.

Educational Efforts for Unemployed Are Latest Plans

A citywide program of entertainment and education for the unemployed was announced yesterday by the Adult Education Council of Chicago. The public school and universities of the city, the public library, civic and women's clubs and settlements will cooperate in the venture.

All of the programs will be free to the adults of the communities in which they are staged, the purpose of the plan being to provide the unemployed with a means of using their enforced idleness for cultural and educational development.

The programs will be presented in public schools, park field houses, settlements and community centers throughout the city, but particularly in those areas where unemployment is most prevalent. In addition to educational, musical, dramatic and motion picture programs, coaches and teachers will be provided for classes, dramatic and musical groups, and public discussion hours.

Rural Towns Copy Big Ones, Teacher Says

U. of C. Author Cites New Rustic Life.

BY CHARLES COLLINS.

Three years of study as a sociologist has convinced Albert Blumenthal of the University of Chicago faculty that morality in the small towns of America differs only in its rusticity from that of the big cities.

Mr. Blumenthal made his study in preparation for his thesis which is to be published on Jan. 5 under the title of "Small Town Stuff."

The village maiden, the author found, no longer wears a starched petticoat and a blush, nor does she sing "Lips That Touch Liquor Shall Never Touch Mine" at the B. Y. P. U. or Epworth league meetings. She is more likely to be found in a roadhouse on Sunday evenings, dancing to the music of a big city orchestra brought by the radio, Mr. Blumenthal says.

The rural towns have everything the city has in the people, except the "extremely pathological" and the "genius," according to the investigator. Examples cited are the 12 year old girl who feels "left out" if she doesn't smoke when "all the other girls do"; the local hardware store that sells 22,000 bottle caps in a year; the town bootlegger, whose house rivals the banker's, and the girl "with ideals," who isn't popular with the boys. The villages have home grown architecture and a scarcity of bath rooms, according to Mr. Blumenthal, but proportionately there are less horses than are seen on the streets of Chicago. Every family has a small automobile, bought on the installment plan.

Politics in the rural communities is extremely personal, there being no organized political units, the author says. Some of the important personal factors that enter into a political race are illustrated by phrases gathered from the campaigns of 1928 and 1930—"already has a job," "doesn't trade at our store," "unfaithful wife," "too sissified to drink," "he needs the job," "never got his hands dirty at hard work in his life," "he makes a good appearance when he's dressed up," and "since when did that Bartlett kid become so smart."

A Stranger	Lew Elwood
Quinn	George Winfred

BY CHARLES COLLINS.

HERE is "Broken Dishes," hopefully established at the Adelphi theater, and one should speak of it gently, no doubt, as a specimen of American folk comedy which is rapidly becoming obsolete. It deals with the home life of simple villagers in that vague bucolic hinterland which Broadway playwrights erroneously label "the middle west:" It tells a mild, improbable story about Futher, Mother and the Girls; and it makes assiduous efforts to win the approval of the unsophisticated.

My custom, when asked to express an opinion on a play like "Broken Dishes," is to interrupt my yawns with the remark: "It has a good heart." This is faint praise, of course, in these feverish times when purity of spirit is not regarded as a virtue in the drama; but it is not uttered with intent to damn. "Broken Dishes" has survived accusations far more unkind.

If my statistician is correct, this play ran in New York for months and months and months, and whenever it had outlived its welcome in one playhouse it promptly found sanctuary in another. It established a new economic precedent, and entertained its customers, not only on the "two for one" basis so familiar to Chicagoans, but also at "three for one," and maybe even "four for one." It achieved the cut-rate championship.

Another way to define "Broken Dishes" without cruelty is to say that it is not a play for dramatic critics. Its methods are too elementary for the professional playgoer. It does not credit its audiences with any power of observation, but painstakingly repeats its points, every fact in its story and every joint in its structure, from three to thirty-six times. I did not keep a box score on it, but I am confident that Papa Bumpsted, the homely hero of the fable, said thirty-six times that he had to wash the dishes.

But although it has a good heart, "Broken Dishes" runs counter to the leading tradition of American sentimentality in drama. It is distinctly an anti-Mammy play. It is for Daddy, first, last and all the time, but it takes his mate for a decidedly brutal ride.

Mrs. Bumpsted, you see, was a nagger of ferocious zeal. Under her perpetual brow-beating, her husband had become a fidgety, frightened, dish-washing sert. Two of her daughters had been bullied into hopeless spinsterhood. As the play starts she is turning the batteries of her scorn and snobbery upon her youngest girl, who wants to marry an apprentice haberdasher. "Out of my house, Bill Clark," says Mrs. Bumpsted, the meanest Mammy of them all; and that starts a plot which ends with the complete emancipation of Mr. Bumpsted and the total humiliation of the nagging matriarch.

Perhaps Martin Flavin, who has been known to put thought and purpose into his writings for the theater, felt that he was composing a problem play when he dashed off "Broken Dishes." Perhaps he believed that a resolute and trenchant blow should be struck at all the mammies who think that they are running this country of ours. At any rate, in the third act climax, when Mrs. Bumpsted is denounced by her daughter and "laid out," as the saying goes, like a punctured balloon, Mr. Flavin has written a speech that sounds dangerously like a tirade from the French problem plays of 1900.

The performance is competent, and the trade of character a ting is well illustrated. Chester Clute as the father, Eleanor Hicks as the mother, Vera Andren as the romantic daughter, and Del Cleveland as the suitor are the most active and successful members of t' good cast.

My most serious objection to the piece is that it makes only a feeble effort to live up to its title. I hoped that it would end in a comic fury of crashing china; but the damage only amounted to two tea cups and the hand painted vase that was a gift from Aunt Emma. Nothing but the merry rampage of a bull in a china shop could have compensated me for sitting patiently through all three acts of a play like "Broken Dishes."

"Rhapsody in Black," a revue by a company of Negro entertainers, including Ethel Waters, began an engagement at the Garrick theater last night; and "Elizabeth the Queen" returned to Chicago, at the Studebaker, with Elisabeth Risdon as its star. These performances will be reviewed later.

County Health Official Lauds School Lunches

Rural Supervisor Praises Readers' Fund.

Cash contributions to the Hungry School Children's fund will be received at the following Tribune offices: 1 South Dearborn street, 1101 East 63d street, and 4152 West Madison street.

THE TRIBUNE'S Hungry School Children's fund, financed by gifts from TRIBUNE readers to provide free hot lunches for needy school children, was heartily approved yesterday by Miss Harriet Fulmer, supervisor of the rural public health division of the Cook county board.

"There can be no greater privilege than feeding hungry children," Miss Fulmer said. "Chicago should be proud that it has assumed this particular job, made necessary in a great emergency."

Parent-teacher groups in many country towns are feeding several hundred children, Miss Fulmer said.

Yesterday's contributions totaled $325. They were headed by the $100 contribution of Mrs. Louise C. Ernst, 1400 Lake Shore drive. They are:

26.13—Lansit Corrugated Box Co., 2435 South Rockwell street.
$25—Jessie Bells Elliott, Arden Shore, Lake Bluff, Ill.
$20—Anonymous.
$16.88—Delta chapter, Sigma Alpha sorority, card party proceeds.
$15—Iota of Sigma Phi Pi.
$10—R. M. R. and E. B. D., Wheaton; "From Oak Park Friends;" Mr. Wynne; A. E. Barnhak, Edgewater Beach hotel; three grandchildren, Lake Forest; John H. Abbot of Continental Illinois Bank and Trust company; Walston Trust, Continental Illinois Bank and Trust company.
$8—Delta Kappa Nu sorority, Eta chapter.

School Trustee Cites Work to Prevent Children's Blindness

The work of the Illinois Society for the Prevention of Blindness in coöperating with the classes in sight conservation conducted in the public schools was praised yesterday in a letter from Mrs. W. S. Hefferan, member of the board of education.

Mrs. Hefferan said the society had been largely instrumental in securing an increase in the state's appropriation for the Chicago sight conservation classes from $26,000 to $75,000.

"They have worked in the classes, coöperating with the department of health, which has assigned an oculist for the examination of all children entering and leaving these classes," wrote Mrs. Hefferan.

Science Finds New Ways to Test the Babies

Can Foretell What Ones Are Left Handed.

New Orleans, Dec. 27.—(AP)—A new X-ray discovery, disclosing at birth whether a baby will become right or left handed, was set up here tonight for the annual meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science beginning tomorrow. It is expected also to save many baby lives.

The ray is part of 100 scientific exhibits, the largest show that "pure" science ever put on in this country.

The exhibits include a test whether there is any chemical difference between Republicans and Democrats.

The public actually will hear and count the mysterious cosmic rays as they plunge like silent arrows completely through the listener's body.

They will see water forming wire strong as brass, and look at the beautiful color from the long sought nucleus of the atom. They will be invited to ride bicycles to learn how their use of energy can be measured in a new way.

These are a few peeps at the ordinarily secret marvels of scientific laboratories, most of them things of no present use known, but all foreshadowing the future progress of man. Scientists usually hide such experiments from the public, but this year the association, the largest scientific body in the country, has turned over a new leaf. The exhibits are under the direction of Dr. F. C. Brown of Washington and Owen Cattell of New York City. The "handedness" discovery is the result of five years' X-ray study of 500 babies at Blodgett Memorial hospital, Grand Rapids, Mich., by T. O. Menees, M. D., and L. E. Holly, M. D.

When a baby is born the upper ends of the bones of its arms and legs reveal the secret. The bone is already more dense, either on the right or left side, and this density corresponds with the hand the baby will favor. Dr. Menees said this bone shadow had proved correct in nearly 90 per cent of the babies. The discovery is useful in view of recent tests indicating that forcing a left handed child to be right handed may retard mental development.

A more useful result of the five year study is a method that promises to save the lives of many babies which have to be taken from their mothers prematurely by operations. In such operations the babies will live provided they have developed sufficiently beforehand. It has been difficult to know precisely when the unborn baby was ready.

The Grand Rapids X-ray method reveals in the density of the unborn baby's bones whether it can be expected to live. The bones, said Dr. Manees, are a more accurate indication of the baby's chances for life than is its weight, which has heretofore been the basis of diagnosis.

The cosmic ray counter is exhibited by Rice institute of Houston, Tex. It is a little receptacle including electrified gas, so that every time a cosmic ray plunges through the gas an electric impulse is set going, and amplified to an audible tick. The ticks—meaning rays—come about as often as those of a clock.

The Rice physicists also have another gadget which measures ultraviolet rays—sunburn rays—showing that they are not a steady stream, but intermittent like hailstones. This sensitive instrument shows that you get tan rays even from a burning match. It picks them up 300 feet away from the match.

Priests Bless Ground for New Russian Congregation

Dignitaries of the Greek Orthodox Catholic church yesterday blessed the ground at 53d street and Western avenue which is to be the site of SS. Peter and Paul church, a Carpatho-Russian congregation. Among those who took part in the ground breaking ceremony were the Very Rev. Peter N. Semkoff, archpriest of St. Michael's Greek Orthodox church, who will also be pastor of the new church; Archimandrite Timon and the Very Rev. Sergius Sniegereff of Holy Trinity cathedral, 1121 North Leavitt street, and the Very Rev. V. Kedrovsky of Gary, dean of the Chicago district.

THE OPERA

BY EDWARD MOORE.

ETTILIO BAGGIORE, registering as guest artist, appeared with the Civic Opera company Saturday night as Edgar in "Lucia di Lammermoor," and in one brief scene established himself in the high favor of the audience. No more distinctive hit has been made by one person this season.

Mr. Baggiore classifies as a lyric tenor. He was born in Michigan of Italian parentage, has sung much in Italy, and for the last two seasons has been appearing in concerts in many parts of the United States, where he is greatly liked. This was his first operatic appearance in Chicago.

His voice is high, clear, and with the bead of quality in it. He sings with accented energy, projecting his words clearly, and giving word and tone a dramatic as well as lyric expression that becomes stimulative, and this in a score having a few surprises as "Lucia." In fact there is strong reason to believe that the audience was entirely correct in bestowing its approval in so marked a manner. He has the voice and the talent that make operative performances a popular form of entertainment.

In the rest of the cast, Margherita Salvi lent her slender, flexible voice to the fireworks of the soprano rôle and registered a notable success of her own. Vittorio Damiani dealt faithfully with the music allotted to Lord Henry Ashton, and Chase Baromeo was a newcomer in the part of Raymond, looking suprisingly like pictures of James G. Blaine the while. Frank St. Leger conducted. The opera was followed by the scene of the chorus and dances from "Prince Igor" under the direction of Emil Cooper.

Movie Gossip as It's Heard in Hollywood

BY GEORGE SHAFFER.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Hollywood, Cal., Dec. 27.—Harry Cohn, head of the Columbia studios, who proved his diplomacy many times before, when he induced Barbara Stanwyck to end her walkout and come back to his studio to work for less money than she demanded, and then topped it off by signing Barbara's husband, Frank Fay, to act in a Columbia film also, in spite of Frank's strongly expressed criticism, now faces a job really worth his mettle.

Cohn is trying to reconcile Actor Ben Lyon, one of his featured players, and Cedric Lamarr, 19 year old prop boy. Lamarr accuses Lyon of punching him in the face during an altercation at the studio one afternoon last week.

Lamarr says Lyon resented the fact that Lamarr was compelled to keep Bebe Daniels, Lyon's wife, waiting for him off the stage where Lyon was making a scene in his current film production with Constance Cummings. The prop boy said he was carrying out orders to finish a task when he informed Miss Daniels she would have to stay off the set and wait.

Lamarr announced today that he has retained an attorney.

Lyon says the youth was unnecessarily curt. Lyon tried to patch the quarrel up by sending a sum of money in an envelope to Lamarr, but the prop boy sent it back.

Herbert Brenon's contract has been bought up by the Radio pictures studio. He had three more films to make under his contract, and was supposed to receive $75,000 for each, but when David Selznick, head of the studio, offered to pay off on the basis of $30,000 for each unmade picture, Brenon jumped at the chance to close the deal.

New Sports Suit Is Made of Corduroy

BY BETTINA BEDWELL.

PARIS.—[Special.]—One of the materials heretofore associated only with the garb of the workingman and that now takes front rank in Paris sports fashions is corduroy. Corduroy in velvet, in cotton, and in wool is the favorite fabric of the great Paris dressmakers in their midseason fashion shows.

Schiaparelli launched velvet corduroy on its successful fashion career by making the most talked about coat of last fall in this material. Now Chanel comes forward and fashions the smartest of sports suits from this really beautiful material. In addition to the fabric she brings a new color scheme to sports clothes—black and white. This tonal combination has been dropped from its high position as the favorite for formal daytime clothes only to bob up as the newest thing for sports.

The suit shown in our sketch today is black and white. The straight skirt is made of black velvet corduroy and the jacket is made of white velvet corduroy. In the jacket the ribs of the corduroy are worked to make a decorative pattern. The yoke of the jacket is made of the material, with the ribs placed diagonally, while the enveloping collar that is buttoned up high around the neck is made of the material worked vertically, as are the sleeves and the lower jacket.

The corduroy belt is worked with the ribs horizontal. The short, rounded peplum that finishes the jacket is smart, and so are the bishop sleeves.

Divorce Isn't Always the Road to Freedom, Happiness, Says Doris

BY DORIS BLAKE.

"I have been married twenty-two years and my husband was very good to me. I have a comfortable home. I do all my own housework, and I don't think there is a thing lacking to make the home happy for a man.

"But a year ago a change came over my husband. Accidentally, I ran into him with his machine parked and a woman alongside. I asked what it all meant. For reply I was shoved off the running board.

"Ever since my husband has been mean to me. He goes out several times a week and I'm getting gray from worry. He used to go out before often, but always said he was going to boxing and wrestling matches. He rarely speaks to me now. We own our home, and I hate to break it up. My religion does not permit divorce.

"He holds a city job. If I were to report him, he would lose it. I don't know what to do.—A DISAPPOINTED WIFE."

I've been accused of condoning these other women offenses of men. Of looking upon them lightly. I don't condone them, nor do I think they are cause for light merriment. Not to a woman married to a man for twenty-two years, say. They're tragic things to confront a woman at middle age. BUT—if they happen, isn't it better to turn on more of the head action than is usually evinced under said circumstances?

The woman's first thought is divorce, separation. That's the one and only way out to the women. They have been outraged, belittled, insulted. The vanity props upon which we all lean more or less heavily are swept out from under them. And there is the argument of twenty some odd years devoted to the home organization, after which one should reasonably expect life security.

There are countless numbers of reasons why the wife should feel outraged. But my argument is that divorce or separation does not solve the problem for the woman of middle age. She's rarely equipped to go out and take a place in the world. She's not equipped to live without a man. And just about the saddest group of women in the world are the separated or divorced women without some occupation to engage them.

There's another thing. Some men at middle life go through some sort of psychological stage which moves them to searching around for one last fling at youth. One last fling at the conquest rôle. It does something to their low-ebbed courage, they claim. Of course, it isn't right. But we're talking realities, not ideals. And I think it far better than jumping at divorce that a woman take the long-range view on that man of hers, his temporary, half-crazy emotions, and fight like the very old Nick for her home, her accustomed place in her particular society, and for the return of her husband.

DORIS BLAKE ANSWERS

Time to Make Up.

"Dear Miss Blake: I have been going with a fellow. We had a quarrel. I just found out how much I love him. What would you advise?

"A CHUMP."

Make up. It is silly to let quarrels develop into lifetime separations.

The Bride's Boat

By Coralie Stanton and Heath Hosken

SYNOPSIS.

Kit Lamoure, receptionist in a London family hotel, accepts the offer of a post in the Grand Africa hotel, Soydoret, Kenya. Theo Sable had gone there two years before, after Kit had broken her engagement to him. But Kit still wanted him more than anything in the world. She sails on the "Bride's Boat," Jess North, her cabin mate, a rising girl sent to be married. Lal Crowhurst, the biggest landowner about Soydoret and a most attractive bachelor, is on the boat. He is attentive to Kit. Soydoret proves to be a paradise with many serpents and terrible powers of demoralization to weak natures unused to her new surroundings. Theo Sable, who has taken up big game hunting, arrives in Soydoret. Kit and Theo are overjoyed to have found each other again. But there are unexplainable changes in Theo that Kit can't understand. Ariel Grieve, the fellow, who, scandal has it, owns Lal Crowhurst, also has her tentacles around Theo. A dance and entertainment, to wind up the season, is given at the hotel. Next morning Ariel Grieve is found dead from an overdose of a sleeping drug. She left a letter, apparently written to a man she was in love with and who had let her down. Every one suspects Crowhurst. Theo is accused of cheating in a card game. He declares his innocence, but Kit alone believes him. He leaves next day on a hunting trip.

INSTALLMENT XXXVII.

A CLUTCHING HAND.

As a matter of fact, it was a matter of supreme indifference to Jess whether Theo had cheated or not. All she wanted was to satisfy her curiosity. Also, the fact of Kit's engagement to the young man had opened up a most interesting possibility in the workings of her secret mind. Here was something she could not have dared to hope for in the conduct of her relations with Crowhurst. Here was a trump card placed in her hand, a winner in her own game of life. She had longed for some circumstance to arise so that she could get more and more out of her husband's employer. Something that would cause him to meet her half way.

Well, if she thought this out carefully and played her card properly, wouldn't he be obliged to meet her more than half way?

Jess Graham versus the Man in the Moon!

A game to play for all it was worth!

. . . . . .

Mrs. Dunbar had to send Kit a special invitation to come to tea alone with her one afternoon before the girl would enter the O. C.'s house.

"I understand how good you are."

"My dear, is it kind of you to treat me as an enemy?" the elder woman asked.

"I don't want to embarrass you in your official position, Mrs. Dunbar," the girl answered.

"Need you let this trouble make you hard and bitter?" the level voice went on. "You know I am fond of you. There isn't a soul in Soydoret who doesn't admire you."

"I don't care a pin about their admiration as long as they believe Theo guilty."

"Most of us," said Mrs. Dunbar quietly, "could not assume to form a judgment. We can only be sorry that neither my husband nor Lal Crowhurst was in the room when the accusation was made, so as to prevent such an undignified scene. My dear, you must forgive my speaking plainly."

"I am beginning to think it would have been better if Theo had stayed," flashed Kit, with a look of miserable, outraged pride. "They are saying he has run away. It was I who made him go."

"And you were right, my child. Believe me—I am your friend. I have my own opinion about these older men playing games like baccarat with younger ones. I have seen a good deal of harm done that way. But it is quite impossible that Col. Mervyn and the others trumped up the accusation."

"Everybody says that. They are men of impeccable honor." Kit's voice was icily sarcastic.

"And you are a girl of impeccable loyalty!" Mrs. Dunbar's face broke into a smile so winning that the girl's eyes grew less stony. "Col. Mervyn was here yesterday. He is terribly upset for your sake. He blames himself most strongly for losing his head. He has a reputation for impulsiveness. He asked me to tell you that and to beg you to forgive him."

"What does all that mean, Mrs. Dunbar?" asked the girl.

"I suppose that he would have acted differently if he had known that you were engaged to Mr. Sable," admitted the elder woman somewhat weakly.

"Then it comes to the same thing."

"Everybody likes you so much, Kit."

"I don't want them to like me if they believe Theo guilty," she repeated obstinately.

Mrs. Dunbar sighed and changed the subject as tea was brought in.

"Lal Crowhurst's only remaining relative is dead," she said as she handed Kit a cup. "It was a distant cousin—I should think the wildest of a wild family." Her voice was deliberate as if she wanted her words to carry weight. "Have you heard anything of Lal's family, Kit?"

"No—never."

"His grandfather who first settled in Africa—on the Rand—was called Hellfire Crowhurst because he was so bad that the old Dopper clergymen used to preach about him. It's an ever so old family, but they had lost all their money and lands before this one began to make a fortune again. Lal's father was even worse in his way. Lal's mother died when he was born and his father apparently tried to teach the boy evil ways. He took him to all sorts of places he had no business to and surrounded him with the worst characters among his pals. They said he had lost his mental balance after a bad fall from a horse. When he died Lal was only a boy of seventeen and his father left him everything he had with no trustees, no guardians. Think of it, a boy of seventeen with all that money and power! Brought up among the fastest set in South Africa!"

Kit was listening, fascinated. It was the second time Mrs. Dunbar had made her own wrongs seem small by recounting Crowhurst's greater ones. It was not so much the actual words as the picture conjured up—that perilous whirlpool, that exaggerated power!

"What a dreadfully sad life!" she said slowly.

"Lal has come through it, though. I don't know why I told you, Kit—particularly today. Perhaps because I thought you would understand why I am his friend. Lal may have done a lot of harm in his life. I don't know. But he has done a lot of good. People would be amazed if they knew how much. But he doesn't tell that. And I'm afraid he has rather advertised the dark side of the shield."

Kit thought of his motto again—"Fear thyself only!" Truly, he had a great deal to fear. That haunted, tormented look. "The years that the worst hath eaten . . ." The motherless boy . . .

She found tears in her eyes. They were not for herself or for Theo. Something stirred in her that made her go up to Mrs. Dunbar and put her arms round her neck.

"I understand how good you are," she said, and smiled for the first time for days, except in bitterness. "And what a wonderful friend!"

. . . . . .

"The memsahib from Ulimosi wishes speech with your honor," announced Crowhurst's Indian man servant, entering his master's study at Moss Fields.

"But, Ali Chand, did I not tell you that I would see nobody this afternoon?" replied Crowhurst in Hindustani, looking annoyed.

"Your honor said you would see no one unless it was important. The memsahib says her business is of great importance. She makes big tamasha about seeing your honor."

Crowhurst sighed heavily.

"Ali Chand, you son of an infidel, you have been with me for ten years and you cannot guard my peace! What have you done with the memsahib?"

"I have placed her in the big room, your honor."

A look of hesitation crossed Crowhurst's face. Then he frowned and said shortly: "Tell the memsahib that I will be with her in a few moments."

"Salaam, hasur!" And the man withdrew.

Jess Graham, looking very small and decidedly plumper, was standing in front of the cedar and olive wood fire that burned under the enormous carved marble mantelpiece of the big room.

She had thrown her rain coat and topee on a couch. She was holding out one of her small feet, in its enormously high heeled shoe, to the flames. She was silhouetted against the blaze and her sleek black Japanese-looking head with the fluffy curls in front and behind and her round, creamy face looked very charming.

A happy marriage, that is a woman's best beautifier, thought Crowhurst. No matter what sort of a woman she was.

Child Lives in World Scaled to Adults and So Accidents Happen

By GLADYS HUNTINGTON BEVANS.

No matter how much we may think we do for children, it is really a grown-up's world in which they live. The scheme of things is for adults. And when you think how many children there are all the time in the world who should be living fully in the present each childish day, it seems rather strange that so little of the world is scaled to their needs.

Take such a simple practical matter as home furnishings. Children's homes, most children's homes, are made for the convenience and artistic satisfaction of the adults in the family. There is no consistent scaling down to a child's physical needs.

Tables and closets and shelves and chairs are too big, too high, too heavy for a child. Lamps, bric-a-brac [alas, it's been revived!] and other fragile or breakable things are left within the child's reach, where if they meet with disaster the child is made unhappy.

Fabrics that are delicate in texture or color, fine surfaces of wood that mar easily or scratch, present themselves for his everyday use. Wall papers that show the ineradicable marks of small hands or unwittingly elevated feet, or stubbing toes make of him a behavior problem. Conventions and manners of staid grownups bear down upon him—upon the child who should be and is concerned with more vital things than these.

The child has to live in an adult world. We must bear that in mind and let it make us more tolerant, more patient and more understanding, when our poor little bull in a china shop brings about a crash—or a smudge, or a tear!

Ruth Crossett, and E. S. French Are Engaged

THE engagement of Miss Ruth Crossett, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Clark Crossett of 1900 Lake Shore drive, to Edward S. French, son of Mrs. Joseph O. Eaton of Cleveland, O., was announced last night at a buffet supper given by Miss Crossett's parents.

Miss Crossett, who was one of the most popular of last winter's debutantes, attended the Ethel Walker school and Bryn Mawr college. She was presented last season at a buffet luncheon at her parents' apartment and later was given a debut dinner-dance at the Casino.

Mr. French is a graduate of the Taft school and Williams college. He has been residing in Chicago since last summer. The wedding probably will take place in June at the Crossetts' summer place at Wianno, Mass.

Younger Set Attends the Harvard Clubs' Concerts.

All the younger members of society, and many of those who have graduated into the older group, were at the Studebaker theater yesterday afternoon for the Harvard University Instrumental club's concert. The theater was packed and every one seemed to enjoy thoroughly the musical and humorous efforts of the Harvard banjo, vocal and mandolin clubs and the Gold Coast orchestra.

Ellery Sedgwick, who made many friends here when he visited in Lake Forest and Lake Geneva last summer, astounded the audience by his apparently magic sleight of hand tricks and when he exposed his tricks and tried to explain them to the audience he mystified every one even more than ever.

Before the concert the undergraduates had been present at a large luncheon given at the Casino by Mrs. Edward I. Cudahy and Miss Helen Gurley for Miss Louise Clark, and afterwards they had tea with Mr. and Mrs. Barrett Wendell at their new apartment, 1260 Astor street. Today the Harvard club is entertaining them at luncheon at the H. Y. P. club and in the afternoon there is to be a large tea-dance at the Indian Hill club.

Mrs. Lawrence Howe, Mrs. Laird Bell, Mrs. Albert C. Koch, Mrs. Raymond E. Durham, Mrs. F. Goddard Cheney, Mrs. Arthur G. Cable, Mrs. Everett L. Millard, Mrs. Philip W. Moore, and Mrs. F. Frank Daumann will be hostesses.

Tonight the clubs will give a concert in the Jane Kuppenheimer Memorial hall of the Skokie school, Winnetka.

Some of those at yesterday's concert were Mr. and Mrs. Howard F. Gillette, whose son Howard Jr. was one of the mandolin players; Kellogg Fairbank Jr., Hurlburd Johnston, and John W. Valentine, who, with Donald McClure, were in charge of arrangements [Mr. McClure left Christmas night for a trip to California]; Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Brown and Betty Brown, Mr. and Mrs. Graham Aldis, Mr. and Mrs. Lyell H. Ritchie, Dr. and Mrs. Edwin W. Ryerson, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Rinaker, Miss Marjorie Horton, Miss Gurley, Mrs. Cudahy, Miss Clarke, Mr. and Mrs. Vail R. Bucklin, Miss Imogene Bucklin, Mr. and Mrs. Francis R. Dickinson, Miss Alice May Dickinson, Mrs. Edwin Dewes, and Miss Dorothy Dewes, Mrs. Charles D. Frey and Miss Betty Frey, Mrs. Charles H. Schweppe, Mrs. Kersey C. Reed, Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin L. Behr and Miss Edith Behr, and Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Borland.

Miss Margaret Chapman Makes Her Debut Tonight.

The debutantes and their beaux, who have been dining and dancing and teaing at such a furious pace this past week, will meet again tonight at the debut dinner dance which Mr. and Mrs. John A. Chapman and Mr. and Mrs. Fowler McCormick are giving at the Casino for Miss Margaret Chapman. Along toward midnight they'll go from the Casino to the Blackstone for the ball which Mrs. A. Harris Whiting is to give for Miss Louise Clarke, who made her debut in early November.

Mrs. George I. Haight of Evanston is giving a luncheon today at the Women's Athletic club for her daughter, Miss Valerie Haight, who is at home from Connecticut college for the holidays.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert J. Thorne, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas C. Dennehy, Mr. and Mrs. Vaughan C. Spalding, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Garfield King, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hibbard, and Mr. and Mrs. Samuel T. Chase are among those who will give dinner parties tomorrow evening before the tennis matches at the Chicago Stadium for the benefit of the J. E. R. F.

Mrs. Jacob Baur returned yesterday from a Christmas visit with her sister-in-law, Mrs. Mary Greiner, at Terre Haute, Ind. Mrs. Baur will preside at the luncheon meeting of the Woman's National Republican club tomorrow at the Chicago Woman's club. Rufus C. Dawes will talk at the luncheon on the Century of Progress and later the members will tour the World's Fair buildings.

Plans are in the making for a benefit to be given for La Société Franco-Americaine on Jan. 17. The French consul and a group of interested men and women are to meet for tea next Monday with Mrs. Charles S. Dewey to form committees and to start preparations for the affair.

Miss Florence Dibell Bartlett will give a talk on "Peasant Life and Art in Sweden" tomorrow afternoon at Fullerton hall in the Art institute. Members of the Renaissance society have been invited to attend.

Simplicity Is Secret of Clothes Chic, Says Famous Screen Star

BY ANTOINETTE DONNELLY.

I sat in, the other afternoon, at a hairdressing session with Miss Lilyan Tashman, the screen actress. She's the girl with the reputation of being the best dressed woman in Hollywood. Which is some reputation to have and to hold, you'll agree.

Miss Tashman certainly knows her lines and colors. She knows the things that Lilyan Tashman should wear and should not wear. Which is about all you can say for any one who achieves a reputation as an outstanding clothes artist. I mean, there isn't any more to say.

For the afternoon hairdressing appointment Miss Tashman was wearing a silver-gray woolen dress, cut extremely simle, with just a bit of white pique at the throat for relief. An unusually designed chain necklace made of aluminum circled the slender throat. Her coat was gunmetal broadtail with a silver fox collar. Gray suede shoes and a small hat with a nose veil completed the tres chic costume.

Some observations were made by Miss Tashman on clothes, as her very blond hair with a natural wave was submitted to a skilled finger waver. She wears her hair with a slight side part, the rest brushed smartly off the forehead, over the ear tips and in small, flattish curls raised well up off the nape of the neck in back.

Of clothes, Miss Teshman said: All well dressed women dress pretty much alike, in quiet colors and simple lines. Simplicity, simplicity is the formula extended, no matter who the frock or occasion. But it's that sophisticated simplicity that concentrated study evolves in a wardrobe. Aiming to be original in dress is a mistake, in the screen star's opinion. It's apt to tie you up in a knot of unbecoming, not-smart things, so to speak.

Her own clothes, for instance, she says may be expensive, and I'll add that those of them I saw, are—but they're simple and they're quiet. Well—anyway as quiet as that stunning white evening frock with the ox-blood velvet sash and shoes matching the ox-blood nail polish. The only jewelry worn with that evening costume was a large ruby ring. Jewelry for the daytime should be costume jewelry. Diamonds, sapphires, emeralds, or what have you for brilliant dinner and evening wear. A well dressed business girl could do beautifully, thinks our dress authority, on a suit, dark gray, blue, black or brown; a woolen dress, a better dress-up dress [afternoon or Sunday type] and a dance frock or two. There should be a couple of waists for the suit.

LIBRARIES DISCOVER PUBLIC READS FOR CLEW TO DEPRESSION

How public libraries can best meet the problems of the business depression will be the principal topic at the annual midwinter council of the American Library association, opening today and continuing tomorrow at the Drake hotel. Three hundred delegates, representing the 15,000 members of the association, will attend.

The most pressing problem of the profession, according to Miss Josephine Adams Rathbone, president of the association, is to devise a program for carrying on the increased service arising from the widespread unemployment in the face of budget cuts decreed by the economies of city governments.

"On the one hand," Miss Rathbone explained, "reading and reference rooms are crowded with patrons who never before had so much leisure. In some cities books are circulating in twice the number now as they were a year ago. The demand for literature on the causes of depression, on vocational readjustment, on trades and occupations is increasing every month."

Junior Hadassah Reports $100,000 Budget Is Met

New York, Dec. 27.—(AP)—An encouraging financial report was submitted today to the more than 500 women delegates who came from as far west as Omaha and as far south as Texas to attend the ninth annual convention of Junior Hadassah, the Young Women's Zionist Organization of America. The delegates were informed that the organization had met fully its increased budget of $100,000, of which $85,000 goes to support of projects in Palestine and the remainder to American administrative expenses. The organization is now represented in 190 cities in the United States.

A FRIEND IN NEED

BY SALLY JOY BROWN.

Wants Black Dress, Size 42.

"A woman I know has been in financial distress for months. She has just recently had an opportunity to work in a department store but could not accept the position because she has no black dress to wear. If some one could spare one in size 42 it would be greatly appreciated. M. P."

I am sure some one has the dress which M. P.'s friend needs so urgently. Surely it's a pity that she must turn down employment for lack of a suitable working costume.

CHILD'S DRESS.

Here is a new raglan sleeve, pantie frock—just the thing for girls who love to romp and play. It is easily made and easily laundered—two good points. Cotton broadcloth, percale, gingham, and wool challis are among the suitable materials. Printed cotton broadcloth in yellow and brown, trimmed in navy blue, trimmed in red, are pleasing suggestions.

The pattern, 2509, comes in sizes 2, 4, and 6 years. Size 4 requires 1¾ yards of 39 inch material with ⅝ yard of 35 inch contrasting.

Miss Carpenter, P. C. Hill Wed in Vermont

Burlington, Vt., Dec. 27.—[Special.]—In a brightly lighted church, against a background of Christmas trees and evergreen, the marriage ceremony was performed at 4 o'clock this afternoon for Miss Genevieve Baldwin Carpenter and Patrick C. Hill. The bride is the daughter of John Alden Carpenter, composer, and the late Mrs. Rue Winterbotham Carpenter of Chicago. The groom is the eldest son of Col. and Mrs. David Hill of London and County Antrim, Ireland.

The Rev. R. A. Hall, pastor of the Congregational church at Charlotte, Vt., officiated. The church, at which the bride's parents worshiped during their residence here in the summer months, was filled with members of the families and intimate friends.

The bride wore a satin gown adorned with pearl embroidery and appliqué velvet and silver bands. Her veil was of rose point lace, held over her forehead with a jewelry piece fashioned of pearls and a band of orange blossoms caught the veil to the back of her head. Over the lace fell a long tulle veil that covered the train of her dress.

Miss Carpenter carried a small bouquet of gardenias and green leafy sprays. She was unattended.

Christmas carols were sung as the service began. A song, especially written for the bride by her father, was sung at the close of the service. Immediately following the ceremony a wedding supper for the family and a few friends was served at the home of the bride's uncle, Joseph Winterbotham Jr. of Burlington.

Mr. and Mrs. Hill left on a wedding trip soon afterwards. About the middle of January they will make their home at Fort Worth, Tex.

Cyrena Van Gordon Plans to Sing at Church Jan. 24

Mme. Cyrena Van Gordon, contralto of the Chicago Civic Opera company, will be soloist with St. Patrick's church choir, under the direction of Dr. J. Lewis Browne, at a sacred concert in the church at Adams and Des Plaines streets Sunday evening, Jan. 24. The concert will mark the diamond jubilee celebration of the church building. Although the building is just seventy-five years old, the parish was established eighty-five years ago, the original church being a frame building at the corner of Randolph and Des Plaines.

Official Contract

By Charles True Adams

(International bridge authority; author of "Official Contract at Sight.")

A certain small percentage of all peoples is born with unusual talents and vivid imaginations. They either reach the pinnacles of success or end up in that discrumpled and bitter disappointed class which keeps the radical pot boiling. They are never a part of the great average normal and somewhat mediocre majority.

A vivid imagination, coupled with playing talent, always produces excitement at the bridge table. Such players will get the utmost out of many hands and at times gain results astounding to the average player, while at other times they are penalized to a great degree. South in yesterday's play-a-problem had imagination—a great deal of it. This was the hand:

NORTH (Dealer)
♠—Q,7,3,2
♦—Q

WEST
♥—A,K
♦—A,10

EAST
♠—4
♥—5,4,3
♦—9,8,7,6,5,4,3

SOUTH
♠—K
♥—Q,10,9,8,7
♦—K,J,2
♣—Q,J,8,7

North opened the bidding with one club. East passed. South overcalled with one heart and West bid spades. North and East then passed. Now South set his imagination to work.

He reasoned as follows: North was unable to support the hearts. He could not have held much strength in diamonds. (This is a fallacy, since North could have held the A and Q.) North, therefore, must have his side strength in spades. South thereupon bid one no-trump. West bid two spades. North and East passed. Since North did not help along South's no-trump and since South held four supporting tricks for North's clubs, South bid three clubs. West passed. North, reasonably enough, thought that South must have a stop in spades (probably the K) and, since he had the spades twice stopped himself, North decided that South must have the diamond tops to justify the bidding. He did not feel that they could make game in clubs and therefore switched back to three no-trumps. All passed.

West opened the ♠ 7, North played the 2, East the 4, and South the K. South then led the ♥ 7, West taking the trick with the K. Since West could now count all the spades, he led the ♠ A, on which East discarded the ♦ 3 and South the ♣ 7. He followed by leading the ♠ 3, which North took with the J, East discarding the ♦ 4 and South the ♦ 2. Dummy now led the ♥ J, East played the 4, South the 8, West taking the trick with the A. West now led the ♠ 6, dummy played the Q, East discarded the ♦ 5, and South the ♦ J. Dummy then led the ♥ 6, which South took with the 9. Next south cashed in his ♥ Q-10 and his ♣ Q-J. He then led his ♣ 3 to dummy's K and took the last trick with the dummy's ♣ A, making his bid and one extra.

There is no possible way by which South could have reached a three no-trump declaration except by vivid flights of imagination. He was right and gained a game and an extra trick. He could easily have been wrong and taken a tremendous set. Every now and then some one returns from an important tournament with the remark that the really expert players seem to feel where the cards are. This is the type of hand they are talking about.

It is obvious that West, by playing out his ♦ A, could have held South down to the game contract and have saved the extra trick. West, however, was not concerned with an extra trick. His spades were established and his one hope of an entry was the ♦ A. If this entry could have been used he was ready to place a large penalty against North and South.

PLAY-A-PROBLEM: SOLITAIRE OR PARTNERS

Play this hand tonight at your bridge game. Keep a record of the bid and play in the spaces provided. Numbers in the bidding squares are for successive rounds. Check your results with tomorrow's answer.

To play "Solitaire": Record the bids you think each hand would make in the bidding squares. After the final declaration has been made start the play, leading from the hand at declarer's left. As you play each card cross it off of the diagram and record it in the proper square, as S. 3, H. K, etc. In the last column indicate the hand which won the round and lead from that hand on the next round.

Send your bridge problems to Charles True Adams, The Chicago Tribune; inclose stamped, addressed envelope.

Food Talk

Breakfast is an important meal and should be a sustaining one. It is the beginning of the day; our stomachs have had a period of rest for twelve hours, so they welcome food. The taxes exacted from household and business cares are a drain on our nervous and physical systems.

The movie people are among those who believe that an adequate breakfast is a prime necessity. One star, a popular singer and actor, is especially particular about his breakfasts on the days he is scheduled to sing. A typical breakfast on these days consists of a pint of grapefruit juice, two poached eggs on toast, crisp bacon, buttered whole wheat toast, and a glass of warm milk. This is an adequate breakfast because it provides the essential food nutrients from calories to vitamins and minerals.

However, even though in our own lives we are not fulfilling stellar public rôles, we do need to start the day off properly with a good meal. Fresh fruits are essential, also milk, and, for supplying the body with vitamins A and D, eggs are important. You need not serve egg poached or soft cooked if you like a change in menus. Parmesan eggs given for tomorrow's recipe are good, and are a delightful change.

PARMESAN EGGS.

4 eggs, separated.
4 tablespoons of Parmesan or other dry cheese, grated.
½ teaspoon of salt.
4 tablespoons of flour.

Beat the egg whites until stiff. Combine the flour, cheese, and salt. Fold into the whites. Place in mounds in a buttered baking dish, glass platter, or on slices of toast. Make a small well in the top of each mound; carefully place the unbroken egg yolk into the well, and bake in a moderate oven [350 degrees Fahrenheit] ten or twelve minutes, or until the egg is set. Garnish with finely diced parsley.

CORN MEAL MUSH.

½ teaspoon of salt.
1 tablespoon of flour.
1 cup of cold milk or water.
1 quart of boiling water.

Mix the corn meal, salt, flour, and milk [or water], and stir to a smooth paste. Add gradually to the boiling water and stir well. Boil for one hour, stirring often. To fry, put the mush in baking powder cans to cool. Remove from them and slice. Then dip them in beaten egg and fry slowly in hot drippings. Serve hot with butter and honey or maple sirup.

King James Version of Bible Is Lauded as Finest English

"Ransack the libraries of the world and if you find a nobler example of English than the King James version of the Bible I will read it from the pulpit where I preach in future," said Charles R. Brown, former dean of Yale university, in an address last night to the Sunday Evening club in Orchestra hall.

Dr. Brown declared that the Bible is not a book, but a record of the growth of a whole nation from its infancy to the time of a mature Christ and that it would never be outgrown.

All that had been outgrown, he added, were certain beliefs about the Bible that once were taught in rural Sunday schools. Ministers, he asserted, had known this for a long time and should tell the truth about it.

DEAN P. C. LUTKIN OF MUSIC SCHOOL AT N. U. IS DEAD

Founder of North Shore Festival.

Peter Christian Lutkin, dean emeritus of the Northwestern university school of music and founder of the North Shore Music festival, died yesterday in the home of his son at 2406 Pioneer road, Evanston. Death was due to heart attack after an illness of two weeks. He was 73 years old.

Dean Lutkin had been active in musical circles in Chicago for more than half a century. Until his retirement last spring he had been on the staff of Northwestern university in the music school for forty years, thirty-four years as dean. He was a composer of church music and part songs.

Funeral Services Tomorrow.

At Dean Lutkin's bedside were his wife, Mrs. Nancy Leilah Carman Lutkin, and his son, Harris Carman Lutkin. Funeral services will be held tomorrow at 11 o'clock in St. Luke's Episcopal church in Evanston. Burial will be in Rosehill cemetery. Bishop George Craig Stewart will conduct the services and will be assisted by the Rev. Charles E. McAllister. The dean's favorite chorals will be sung by the a cappella choir which he organized.

Dean Lutkin was born in Thompsonville, Wis., March 27, 1858, of Danish parentage. At the age of 10 he sang solo alto in the Episcopal cathedral of SS. Peter and Paul of Chicago and at 14 he was organist of the cathedral. He received his early education in public and private schools here. He studied piano under Mrs. Regina Watson, organ under Clarence Eddy and musical theory under Frederick Grant Gleason, all of Chicago.

Joins Staff of N. U.

He studied abroad in Berlin, Paris and Vienna under Oscar Raif of Berlin, Moritz Moskowski of Paris and August Haupt of Berlin. In 1885 he married Miss Carman of Chicago. In 1888 he became director of the theoretical department of the American Conservatory of Music of Chicago and three years later joined the staff of Northwestern university, becoming dean in 1897. He had had an early connection with the university in 1879 when he was assistant instructor of piano before his study abroad.

In collaboration with John R. Lindgren, he formed the Evanston Musical club, which became the basis of the north shore festival. The festivals were begun in 1908 in Patten gymnasium. A chorus of 600 was formed with the Evanston club and the Ravenswood Musical club, which he also organized.

Hold Anniversary Festival.

Mme. Ernestine Schumann-Heink and Frederic Stock participated in the first festival. Last May both joined in the 23d festival as Dean Lutkin retired from active leadership.

Dean Lutkin was a contributor to music periodicals and had aided in the revision of Episcopal hymnals. He was a founder of the American Guild of Organists and a lecturer of the Garrett Biblical institute and the Western Theological seminary. He was a member of the Cliff Dwellers, the University club and the Bohemians.

LITTLE ORPHAN ANNIE: The Summary

DAVID FORGAN FUNERAL WILL BE HELD TODAY

Rites at Evanston for Banker.

Funeral services for David R. Forgan, veteran Chicago banker who died on Saturday, will be held at 3 o'clock today in the First Presbyterian church of Evanston. Dr. John Timothy Stone, president of the Presbyterian Theological seminary, will conduct the services. Burial will be in Rosehill cemetery.

Mr. Forgan was 69 years old. His death was caused by a complication of ailments which brought about the heart attack which was the immediate cause of death.

Starts Career as Youth.

He was co-chairman of the directorate of the Central Republic Bank and Trust company at the time of his death, and had been engaged in banking in Chicago since 1896. He started his banking career in Scotland at the age of 15. He was closely associated in his early years in Chicago with his brother, the late James B. Forgan, president of the First National bank, who died in 1924.

Mr. Forgan organized the National City bank of Chicago in 1907. That was merged with the National Bank of the Republic in 1925, and the latter institution merged with the Central Trust company of Illinois last summer.

List of Pallbearers.

The pallbearers will be Augustus W. Eddy, Douglas Stuart, Andrew W. Johnson, Charles Y. Freeman, Arthur Cable, Lawrence Robbins, Bradford Shinkle, and Chauncey McCormick.

Surviving Mr. Forgan are his widow, Mrs. Agnes Kerr Forgan; two daughters, Mrs. P. Lyndon Dodge and Mrs. Halstead Freeman, both of New York; and three sons, Robert R. Forgan, J. Rusell Forgan and David R. Forgan Jr., all of Chicago. The home is at 1112 Greenwood boulevard, Evanston.

City Hall Character Dead; Police Search for Sister

Johnny Callahan, 70 years old, for years a familiar figure in the county building and city hall, lay dead yesterday in the undertaking rooms of James S. Bradley, 1946 Ogden avenue, while Mr. Bradley and the police tried to find a sister living in the city. Callahan died on Dec. 13 at the county hospital, shortly after he had been found unconscious in West Madison street, in which neighborhood he lived. He was once a policeman and later a political hangeron. Of recent years he had subsisted on gratuities begged from politicians whom he met in public buildings, police said.

EDINBURGH, Scotland.—(AP)—Sir Robert Maule, 77, prominent merchant and philanthropist, died.

INDIANIAN WHO BACKED RESERVE BANK PLAN DIES

Pasadena, Cal., Dec. 27.—(AP)—John Perrin, 74, who died today in Washington, D. C., was one of a committee of bankers who presented the plan for the federal reserve bank system to congress and was active in its organization. He became chairman of the Federal Reserve bank of San Francisco and held the post until his retirement in 1926.

Born in Rossville, Ind., Mr. Perrin was graduated from Yale. After a short time in the hardware business in Lafayette, Ind., he went to Europe to study banking. After his return he became a vice president of the Perrin National bank of Lafayette, an institution founded by his father.

In 1900 the younger Perrin organized the American National bank of Indianapolis and was its president until 1910, when it was consolidated with the Fletcher National bank there.

ISAAC ROSS, 86, VETERAN OF '61, COLLAPSES, DIES

Isaac Ross, 86 years old, civil war veteran, died yesterday in the Englewood hospital, shortly after he collapsed on the sidewalk in front of his home at 6833 South Green street. Death was attributed to heart disease.

Mr. Ross as a child lived in Springfield and knew Abraham Lincoln. He enlisted in the 63d Ohio infantry when he was 16 and served with that unit during the war. He came to Chicago about forty years ago and worked as a blacksmith. Surviving him are one daughter and one son.

Attorney Henry Spurlock Dies at Lake Bluff Home

Henry B. Spurlock, attorney, died yesterday in his home, 466 Sunrise avenue, Lake Bluff, at the age of 66. Death was caused by heart disease. Mr. Spurlock was for many years active in Masonic circles and was formerly president of the Greater Federation of Property Owners of Chicago. He was a graduate of Northwestern university. Surviving are the widow, Luella, and a daughter, Mrs. Genevieve S. Northrop. BROADCAST ROAR OF AN ERUPTING VOLCANO TODAY

New York, Dec. 27.—[Special.]—Radio, which already has recorded a bombardment of atoms and the roaring of 100 airplanes in flight, will bring a new sound experience to its listeners tomorrow afternoon by broadcasting from the crater of an active volcano.

A microphone will be lowered into the crater of Mount Kilauea, Hawaii, which has been erupting since Wednesday, and radio audiences will be permitted to hear for the first time the roar of seething lava, exploding bowlders, and the other sounds accompanying a volcanic eruption. A volcanologist will describe the scene from the cabin on the edge of the crater.

Barring unforeseen events, such as the melting of the microphone, the broadcast will begin at 4:15 p. m. and will last thirty minutes. It was arranged by the National Broadcasting company and will be carried over a coast to coast network.

BRITAIN TO ASK WORLD TO SCRAP ALL SUBMARINES

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Dec. 27.—A British proposal for the abolition of all submarines will again be brought up at the disarmament conference at Geneva in February, it was learned today. The official British attitude remains as it was in 1921, that the submarine is inherently incapable of developing its full power of destruction and at the same time stay within the limits of international law. The British proposal will advocate scrapping of all existing submarines and the suspension of work on those being built.

'ARABIAN NIGHTS' CITY ORDERED BY INDIAN PRINCE

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BRUSSELS, Dec. 27.—A new city in India will be built in Arabian Nights fashion—nearly overnight—as soon as a Belgian architect, Ernest Jaspar, arrives in India. The nizam of Hyderabad has asked Jaspar to build him an entire city in neo-Arab style.

Although the new city in Hyderabad is to include a university and all accessory buildings, Jaspar hopes to lay out the town in four or five months. The actual building may take longer, but that will depend on how far the nizam will want to extend his new town.

King Albert of Belgium received the architect today and was greatly pleased that an Indian prince should have called upon a Belgian to build the new city. Jaspar designed the city of Heliopolis near Cairo, Egypt, in a pseudo-Moorish style fifteen years ago.

AISHTON TELLS ROADS' PLIGHT AS YEAR CLOSES

Points Out Defects in Regulation.

"The railroads of this country, as they emerge from 1931, find themselves, in common with industry in general, confronted with problems largely of a financial nature, due for the most part to the present business situation," a statement issued yesterday by R. H. Aishton, president of the American Railway association and chairman of the Association of Railway Executives, said. "However, the present problems of the railroads can also be said to be due in part to two other factors. They are:

"1. Defects in the present regulatory system which prevent the railroads from building up their reserves in normal times so as to enable them to be prepared to face conditions such as now exist, for no system can be termed sound which encourages reductions in rates in prosperous times and necessitates increase in times of economic depression.

"2. Lack of appropriate regulation, so far as interstate commerce is concerned, of the various agencies of transportation designed to bring about a complete and coördinated system of transportation embracing all land and water agencies.

Urges Traffic Control.

"Any upturn in business with the resultant increase in traffic will undoubtedly be of immense aid to the rail transportation systems of the nation. There is need, however, for other steps to be taken in order to preserve, in the public interest, railway credit, and an adequate transportation service. To meet this need, there should be a revision of those provisions in the transportation act which directly and adversely affect the credit of the railways.

"Provisions should also be made for the necessary regulation of all agencies furnishing transportation for hire so that stability will be established and an equal opportunity created among them to compete for the commerce of the nation.

"Taxes also impose a heavy burden on the railways of this country. Railway taxes now are approximately 14 per cent higher than they were ten years ago, and it will require the net revenues of the railroads of this country for a period of four months out of the twelve months to pay their taxes in 1931.

"In the matter of traffic, the year 1931 has been a sad disappointment to the railways. Earnings have correspondingly failed to improve, despite the great strides forward made by the carriers in recent years in the matter of increased efficiency and economy of operation.

Operating Net Down.

"Preliminary reports, which will not become complete for several weeks, indicate that loadings of revenue freight in 1931 will total 37,250,000 cars, a reduction of 8,630,000 cars or 18.8 per cent under those for 1930, and 15,877,900 cars or 29.5 per cent under 1929.

"Preliminary reports for the year show that the class 1 railroads as a whole had a net railway operating income in 1931 of $534,000,000, or a return of 1.93 per cent on their property investment. Class 1 railroads in 1930 had a net railway operating income of $835,000,000, which was a return of 3.36 per cent on their property investment. Gross operating revenues in 1931 amounted to approximately $4,259,000,000, a decrease of 30.3 per cent under those for 1930, while operating expenses amounted to $3,375,000,000, a decrease of 17.6 per cent under the previous year.

"The estimate of earnings for the twelve months of 1931 is based on complete reports for the first ten months and an estimate by the Bureau of Railway Economics as to earnings in November and December. The net railway operating income for the ten months period totaled $472,306,293, compared with $773,287,275 for the corresponding period in 1930."

George Semmlow Made Milwaukee Ad Chief

George A. Semmlow, lately chief clerk in the advertising department of the Milwaukee railroad, has been appointed advertising agent succeeding the late A. L. Eidemiller, who died Dec. 16. He is a native Chicagoan. Ray W. Myles, passenger agent at Gallatin Gateway, Mont., for the last five years, becomes chief clerk in succession to Semmlow. Myles until 1926 was city passenger agent for the Milwaukee road at Cleveland, O.

See Greater Competition in Copper Trade

Domestic copper producers are expected by the tariff commission to face more severe competition from foreign sources in the future.

In its report to the senate covering a three year investigation into the world copper industry, the commission gave two primary reasons for this prophesy:

Desire of foreign governments to provide an adequate supply for themselves in their own territories.

New fields in Africa.

Expansion of refining facilities in other countries, which is expected to divert foreign blister copper hitherto brought to the United States for refining, also was cited.

Basis for Tariff Campaign.

Around these points and the commission's statement that foreign copper cost 1.42 cents a pound less than domestic at American refiners will be built the growing campaign for a tariff.

Congressional delegations from the copper states expect to get things started soon after the Christmas holidays and probably will shape up preliminary plans during the recess.

Among the factors brought out in the commission's report they intend to use in tariff arguments are:

Low grade copper content of domestic ores, averaging around two per cent, as compared with the higher grade foreign ores. This was held by the commission to constitute a "material advantage to foreign producers."

Foreign Wages Lower.

Low wages and costs prevail and tremendous production is probable in Africa.

The average domestic price, including depletion of mines and interest on investment, was put at 13.29 cents a pound, against 11.87 for the imported metal. The figures were for 1928, which the commission termed a more normal year than 1929 or 1930.

PENNSYLVANIA'S NOVEMBER NET INCOME $3,650,891

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Dec. 27.—The Pennsylvania Railroad company reports net operating income for the month of November of $3,650,891, a decrease of $1,829,551 under November, 1930. Gross revenues for November were $31,914,045, a drop of $11,025,980 compared with November, 1930.

For the eleven months ended Nov. 30 the road reports net operating income of $48,136,625, a decline of $40,368,522 compared with the corresponding period last year. The eleven months' gross revenues were $417,291,673, a decline of $118,511,667 from the total reported for the eleven months ended Nov. 30, 1930.

BUSH SEES SLUMP AS TONIC WHICH WILL BRING TRADE HEALTH

New York, Dec. 27.—(AP)—American business may have to weather a new and final storm blowing out of Europe early in 1932, but is now scraping bottom and will emerge stronger than ever, said Irving T. Bush today.

"When we get through this storm," he said, "American industry will make more operating at 80 per cent of capacity than it ever did before going at even 100 per cent."

Bush, former president of the Chamber of Commerce of the State of New York and founder of the international freight forwarding and terminal business which bears his name, described in an interview present adversity as the vitalising tonic for heightened future prosperity. But before we reach that happy state, he added, we must earn the right to enjoy it by facing further hardships that remain to be overcome.

"I am an optimist, but not a fool optimist," said Bush. "There is a difference. If we were on our own, as we were 25 years ago, I believe we would go ahead from here. But things have changed. We are tied into the troubles of Europe by reckless and inexperienced lending. We have tried to be good Samaritans and have only succeeded in being good things.

"I look for further financial trouble from Europe, and, with it, a storm. It will be a blessing in disguise. For when the storm is over I expect the useless slaughter of security values to be ended. Business men will then think about their business and forget the price of their securities.

"The upturn in business will follow, and by fall, 1932, we will begin a new golden era.

"This is not a prophecy of evil. It is of good. Wholesale and retail stocks are small. Money will come out of hiding and many banks, now liquid in fear, will again lend freely. It is a time for dogged courage, for the end is very near and a new and happier day for every one is in the making. We learn only by experience."

EUROPEAN HIGH FINANCE HITS ROCKS IN 1931

Picture of Events Still Obscure.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Dec. 27.—It may need another year before the strange financial twelve month which is drawing to its close can be seen in the true perspective.

Even to men whose vision is usually clear, 1931 appears in retrospect as an utterly confusing picture. To those whose judgment is governed by their emotions, it has been a panorama of complete and irretrievable disaster.

To nobody is it plainly evident exactly what was the real economic meaning of the series of spectacular events which have followed one another since the end of last December. There are, however, some aspects of the last financial year which have not yet received the consideration to which they are entitled.

Remedial Measures.

One is the fact that several important underlying influences have not developed unfavorably in 1931. A year ago it was not at all evident that the organized power of the government and the great banks either would or could be applied to safeguard the danger points of the situation, either at home or abroad. This has been done. The administration, the commerce commission and the strong private banks have united in protective and remedial measures of the most comprehensive scope. In that regard the year end situation is altogether different from the attitude of purposeless drift which prevailed when the year began.

A year ago it was commonly remarked (often with a touch of despair that there could be no business recovery until the fall of staple prices had been arrested. That, too, has happened. The government's index number of average prices at the year end is barely 2 per cent lower than in June, whereas the decline during the same interval last year was 10 per cent. The decline was extremely rapid in the autumn of 1930 and the spring of 1931, but a notable recovery, especially in the crucial direction of agricultural prices, occurred in the recent autumn.

It is perfectly true, on the other hand, that such economic weather signs as steel production and railway traffic have continued up to the year end to indicate progressive deterioration and that company profits and dividends have been cut perhaps to the lowest since the war.

But when all this is said, there remains the picture of chaos which swept over European high finance and the quite unprecedented exhibition of fright and despair on the financial markets.

Mob of Creditors.

Perhaps we do not yet know positively what the last six months in Europe really meant. This much we do know, however—that the panic in Europe's international finance broke out as unexpectedly, ran its course in as complete disregard of ordinary financial sense, and was itself as evident a cause of the calamities which were imagined to have provoked it, as a run of frightened depositors on an east side bank. To European high finance, at any rate, the period's events can scarcely be regarded except as a stigma of discredit.

No one conceived beforehand of such a run as occurred on Berlin and London by the mob of international creditors, and it is still an open question whether the British surrender to depreciated currency would have happened at all, if London's foreign clients had remained in a sober state of mind.

N. Y. BANK LISTS PROBLEMS YET TO BE SETTLED

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Dec. 27.—Stabilization of Europe, balancing of this country's national budget, and restoration of confidence are the outstanding problems of the new year, says the current issue of the Guaranty Survey, published by the Guaranty Trust company of New York. In addition, it is added, international debts, high tariffs, inflation, and political uncertainties are deterrents to economic progress that must be reckoned with, and the process of readjustment to new standards of value must go on.

It may be, the bank says, that the worst of the crisis has been passed, both here and abroad, but only the developments of 1932 can reveal that.

"Two obvious facts, however, face us as necessary precursors of financial stability here," the bank continues. "First, a policy of rigid economy in governmental expenditure must be enforced to balance the nation's budget. Such a policy must also be adopted by cities, states, and other taxing bodies to preserve credit. Second, there is a limit to the borrowing capacity of government, and deficits cannot be indefinitely financed by loans. Injury to the credit of the government and grave losses in value for its securities would inevitably follow reckless borrowing."

GASOLINE CHIEFS LAUNCH DRIVE ON BOOTLEGGERS

Cleveland, O., Dec. 27.—(AP)—An attack on gasoline bootlegging, a fifty million dollar racket rivaling the illicit liquor trade, was mapped out today by W. T. Holliday, head of the marketing division of the American Petroleum institute.

The racket is applied to evade state gasoline taxes, especially where they are higher than 3 cents a gallon, Holliday, who is president of the Standard Oil Company of Ohio, said. He charged that in many places it is operated by large syndicates with great power, huge income, and serious corruption of public officials.

The tax evaders, he asserted, are cheating taxpayers of thousands of miles of modern highways, adulterating motor fuels to the discredit of legitimate dealers, and bringing a threat of a ruinous gasoline price war.

They evade taxation chiefly in seven different ways, Holliday said: Abuse refund and exemption privileges; adulterate motor fuel with nontaxable products; truck across state lines, usually at night; divert ostinsible out of state shipments to the same state; make false bills of lading, and operate dummy sales corporations.

New York Bond Mart Has Week of Ups and Downs

New York, Dec. 27.—(AP)—The bond market during the last week was one of smiles and tears. On Monday and Tuesday almost all classes of loans, led by the long battered rails, continued to climb to upper levels. On Wednesday, however, the tide suddenly changed and various securities, offering but little resistance, gave up part of their hard earned gains. On Thursday there was a further dip.

Hope for growing improvement in bonds was based partly on announcement that bankers and investment corporations had decided to support better grade loans on the ground that they were selling for "bargain" prices. Also a peaceable settlement of the railway wage reduction controversy was reported imminent.

Buy For Investment.

Financiers, while denying any "pool" had been formed to purchase sound securities, admitted their intention of accumulating various issues for purely investment purposes. At the same time they did not promise to hold up prices generally and, when the market had a two-days' sinking spell, they expressed the opinion that it was a natural reaction.

On Wednesday doubts were broadcast in some quarters as to any compromise being reached between the railway executives and the brotherhoods. Although without any apparently substantial basis, these reports were blamed by many traders for further liquidation of carrier liens. As a matter of fact, the rails showed more resistance than either the utilities or industrials in Wednesday's session. But on Thursday they led the move downward.

U. S. Liens Decline.

Nothwithstanding a general sagging of the list, few new lows were reached except in the case of United States government obligations. Most of these issues were subject to more pressure than usual and on the last trading day five of the liens touched bottom figures for the year.

Neither President Hoover's signing of the debt moratorium, nor the Young plan advisory committee's recommendation for a general adjustment of reparations and other international questions, apparently affected the market one way or the other. Even German loans, which it had been thought would be helped by the advisory committee's report, did not respond.

McLellan Stores.

Will you please mail me in the enclosed stamped envelope your advice as to McLellan Stores company stock?
—R. K. M.

McLellan Stores company, originally established about eighteen years ago, operates about 277 five cent to $1 stores in 31 states. The stores are located in New England and southern, central, and middle western states. A few of the larger are owned in fee, but most of them are leaseholds.

Sales for 1930 were $24,047,000, against $23,782,000 for 1929. Net income for 1930 was $257,500, which barely covered preferred dividends, against $1,001,000, equal to $1.34 per common share, for 1929. Net income of predecessor companies for 1928 was $1,291,000, against $1,076,000 for 1927.

For the first ten months of 1931 sales were $18,199,000, a 9.51 per cent decrease from the $20,111,000 reported for the corresponding 1930 period. November, 1931, sales were 14.99 per cent less than November, 1930, sales.

For the twelve months ended June 30, 1931, net before taxes was $538,000, or 50 cents per common share.

At the close of 1930 current assets were $4,496,000 and current liabilities were $1,702,000. Cash was $579,000 and notes payable were $1,250,000.

There were outstanding 35,000 shares of 6 per cent cumulative convertible preferred, series A [par $100]; 7,333 shares of 6 per cent cumulative, series B preferred [par $100], and 562,893 shares of no par common.

Dividends are being paid on the A and B preferred, but none is reported on the common.

Kokomo Steel and Wire.

Will you kindly give me information on the standing of Kokomo Steel and Wire company 6 per cent serial bonds dated 1926?
—J. B. R.

Kokomo Steel and Wire company was incorporated in 1901. With other units in the steel industry it was acquired by Continental Steel corporation.

In 1930 only 33 per cent of fixed charges were earned. In 1929 fixed charges were earned 7.33 times, against 8.21 times in 1928.

Net loss after all charges for the first half of 1931 was $100,000.

On June 30, 1931, current assets were $4,153,000 and current liabilities were $579,000.

The $610,000 Kokomo Steel and Wire company first serial 6s, due Jan. 15, 1941, are secured by a first mortgage on all properties formerly owned by Kokomo Steel and Wire company. There are also outstanding $1,000,000 first 6s due 1937, secured by first mortgage on all other properties of Continental Steel corporation.

The 6s due in 1941 are somewhat speculative.

HOLD WAR DEBT SOLUTION IS UP TO POLITICIANS

Experts' Meetings Seen as Ended.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Dec. 27.—With the presentation last week of the report of the Young plan advisory committee, the problem of reparations and war debts has been laid squarely on the doorstep of politics.

The period of "expert" conferences, begun in 1924, when the Dawes plan was formulated, has ended. From now on whatever is attempted in the solution of the problem must be handled by political rather than economic experts. This is the prevailing viewpoint of Wall street, including, it may be said, those members of the financial community who have in the past lent their services to the task of working out an economic solution of the problem.

Cite Accomplishments.

The financial authorities, meeting in Basle, under the auspices of the Bank for International Settlements, to consider Germany's ability to resume reparations payments on the old scale at the expiration of the Hoover moratorium next July, has accomplished two main ends, as bankers here see it.

First, they have demonstrated the inadequacy of the relief machinery provided under the Young plan to meet the present emergency and by so doing have removed the last obstacle to direct governmental negotiation. Second, they have surveyed the economic background of the problem and presented a statement of facts upon which the political experts can base their discussions.

Is Most Important.

Of these two accomplishments, the first is probably the more important so far as speeding a political solution of the problem. The economic position of Germany was already fairly welll known, according to bankers here, having been discussed at length as recently as last August by the distinguished body of bankers composing the Wiggin-Layton committee, six of whose ten members were also members tee, with a majority of both these committees identical, it was not to be expected that their reports would differ greatly as to general conclusions.

The advisory committee had at its disposal the complete figures of the so-called Melchoir report on Germany's foreign indebtedness, whereas the Wiggin-Layton committee had only the preliminary draft of these figures.

TELEPHONE SECURITIES FOR JANUARY INVESTMENT

THOUGHTFUL investors this year will select securities of proven strength and stability—investments in industries of demonstrated "depression-proof" character, which have maintained previous earnings under existing conditions. Two such investments are:

Telephone Bond and Share Co. and Associated Telephone and Telegraph Co.

Net earnings of these companies in 1931 are in excess of earnings in 1929 and 1930.

The telephone industry at present surpasses all other industries in ability to continue the income of previous years; and securities of firmly established telephone companies are now among the most desirable and secure investments.

Before January commitments are made we suggest that investors write or call for circular of the attractive telephone securities we offer for January investment. Please request circular 206T.

HOLIDAYS ACT AS DRAG ON N. Y. CURB ACTIVITY

New York, Dec. 27.—(AP)—With holiday influences deadening interest, trading on the New York Curb exchange last week was largely of a routine nature.

Price changes were generally small, although a little more of the ground gained on the recent rally was surrendered. Most of the tax selling has made its appearance, brokerage houses believe, but this form of liquidation probably accounted for the occasional easiness prior to the week-end shutdown. Four more days are left for the completion of tax sales.

Utilities tended to sell a little lower and so did the oils. The decision to stop oil production and refinement in Texas on Sundays is regarded as a favorable development, although apparently curtailment has not yet fully matched the smaller consumption demands and the price structure is being watched closely.

TRADE EXCEEDS EXPECTATIONS OF RETAILERS HERE

A brisk volume of last minute orders for inexpensive goods characterized the holiday buying in Chicago during the last week, according to trade observers of the Chicago Association of Commerce. The trade continued to exceed all expectations, and Chicago retailers as a whole appeared agreeably surprised at both the volume and character of their trade.

Crowds in the loop retail stores and in the neighborhood shopping centers equaled those of past years. One leading department store executive stated that the toy trade held up surprisingly well considering present conditions.

Sales by large mail order houses reached their peak during the past week, and were generally said to have shown a normal pickup in percentage over the sales levels of the previous two weeks.

OFFICIAL WEATHER FORECAST.

The official forecast for today and tomorrow and yesterday's table of records follow:

Wisconsin—Fair Monday; Tuesday increasing cloudiness; moderate temperature.

Indiana—Partly cloudy and slightly colder Monday; Tuesday generally fair with moderate temperatures.

Upper Michigan—Partly cloudy Monday and Tuesday; not much change in temperature.

Lower Michigan—Cloudy Monday, possibly preceded by light rain or snow in extreme east portion; Tuesday partly cloudy; not much change in temperature.

Iowa—Generally fair, slightly warmer in extreme west portion Monday; Tuesday unsettled with mild temperature.
